Train derails near Avert

Thirty cars of a Cotton Belt Railroad train derailed near the Castor River Bridge Tuesay afternoon, destroying the bridge and approximately half a mile of track. Several of the trains cars plunged into the river, but all of the crew managed to escape injury. The derailment is believed to have been caused by a broken wheel on one of the cars. The track is shared by Cotton Belt and Missouri Pacific Railroad. Both firms have rerouted all trains. Averi is located five miles northeast of Bloomfield in Stoddard County. Larger scope sought for death penalty

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — In an effort to promote quick agreement between the Missouri House and Senate on a death penalty bill, Sen. Ike Skelton has proposed amendments to the Senate capital punishment measure to increase the number of crimes punishable by death from five to 14.

The House Monday gave final approval of a bill requiring death for 12 types of killing and for the third conviction of selling heroin and other similar hard drugs.

In House action Tuesday, a $52 million emergency appropriations bill, including $7 million for an optometry school at the University of Missouri-St. Louis which earlier was chopped from the bill, was given preliminary approval. But attempts to include transition money for a new Revenue Department computer were turned back.

Skelton, a Lexington Democrat who is the sponsor of the Senate death penalty bill, sought to expand the list of capital punishment crimes in the bill after Sen. Raymond Howard, D-St. Louis, failed with his proposal to delete death provisions for escaped convicts or prisoner on furloughs who kill.

The bill calls for death for persons who kill for payment or who hire others to kill; murder by felons in prison; murder of a policeman on duty; and murder while committing rape, kidnaping or robbery.

Separate bills to restore the death penalty have been passed by both chambers in the past two sessions, but have failed to be sent to the governor to be signed into law because of disagreement on which crimes should carry the ultimate penalty.

Skelton's amendment to bring the Senate version closer to the House bill would add these crimes to the list of those killings madating death when committed:

--During arson, burglary, sexual molestation of a child under 13 years old or an airplane hijacker.

--By the use of a bomb.

--To avoid prosecution of a felony while fleeing apprehension from the commission of a crime.

--By someone previously convicted of first or second degree murder.

--Against a firefighter to prevent him from doing his job, against more than one person in the same incident or series of incidences, against any witness who is to testify against the defendant and against elected federal or state officials.

Sen. Larry Marshall, R-Columbia, a constant opponent of the death penalty , led a successful effort to remove the murder of state and federal officials as a capital offense just before the Senate adjourned for the day.

He said otherwise the law would show the public that "my life is worth more than these people sitting in the gallery."

In the House, approval for the optometry school for St. Louis came despite the suggestion by Rep. Jerold Drake, D-Grant City, that there could be a court suit challenging the legality of the appropriation.

School to have special room for handicapped

The Sikeston school system will have a special classroom for handicapped when the 1975-76 school year begins, superintendent of Schools Sam Harbin told the R-6 Board of Education Tuesday.

In other matters before the board, Harbin said Roger Sherman will become fulltime director of secondary education after July 1 and Robert Buchannan will become principal of the Senior High School.

Harbin told the board the school system would receive an extra $274,226 under a proposed revision in the state law.

A screening program for Sickel Cell Anemia may be established soon by the Missouri Division of Health.

Problems of getting birth and vaccination records on some students in the schools system may bring a change in the school systems handling of the problem.

The board set March 14 as the filing deadline for the April 1 school election.

Handicapped

Four mothers of handicapped children appeared before the board to say their children, while having disabilities, were able to attend public school.

Harbin said the system plans to have a classroom staffed by qualified personnel ready for the next school year. The classroom will be for handicapped children who cannot attend school in the regular classroom.

State law now requires that school systems provide education for handicapped children mentally capable of attending school. In the past, Sikeston had no such program, although wheelchair students had attended classes.

All four of the women at the meeting were mothers of children who cannot walk.

"I feel he has the right to be educated like other children," Sharon Newman said of her four-year-old son.

Harbin said where the children would go, whether to regular school or to the special classroom, would be decided after consulting with parents. But in the end, he stressed, it is the school's responsibility to decide where to put the child.

Beside the special classroom, plans call for transporting the Water bids opened

CHARLESTON — Two bids submitted to the city council for proposed water improvements were opened Tuesday night and taken under advisement for reviewing by R. W. Booker and Associates of St. Louis, engineering firm for the project.

Cowan Construction Company and Bridger Plumbing and Heating Company of Sikeston were the only firms submitting bids. A base bid was submitted along with three alternate bids by each bidder. Alternate bids were submitted in amounts plus or minus the base bid, depending on the work and material included to meet specifications.

Th base bid from Cowan totaled $384,944.90. The alternate No. one bid was minus $11,854.20; alternate No. two bid, minus $5,000; and the alternate No. three bid, was plus $15,375.

Bridger's base bid was $376,391.50 and the company's first alternate bid was minus $8,773.35; alternate No. two minus $50; and alternate No. three bid, plus $15,000.

The proposed program includes extension of water lines , improvement to existing lines and modification of the water treatment plant.

In advertising for the bids the city council reserved the right to reject any or all bids submitted and has 30 days from opening date to review the bids.

Feb. 25 has been set as a special meeting for the council and the decision to accept or reject will probably be made at that time.

Campaign law spurs problems

CHAFFEE — The recently passed Missouri Campaign Finance and Disclosure Law, designed to reform the election process, may actually cost the state some good candidates, John E. Ballard of Rolla, local government specialist for the University of Missouri Extension Division, said Tuesday.

The law, passed by referendum last November did provide teeth to close some loopholes, Ballard said. The law became effective Jan. 1.

"This was just too darned quick," he said.

"The law became effective before the structure for implementing the law could be set up. Something like this takes time. You don't gear up for something like this over night."

The supporters of the measure had good reason, however, to want the early effective date, he said.

He said the supporters were concerned that if the law didn't become effective until 1976, all the big candidates for offices such as governor or senator would already have funds raised before the law went into effect.

In their haste to get the law passed, however, he said certain provisions in the law that could cause problems were overlooked.

One of the problems, Ballard said, is that the law covers all elections. In other words, no matter how small the election, the provisions of the law applies. In many jobs, such as mayor of a small town, all the elected official gets is a lot of work with little pay or thanks, he remarked.

For this reason, Ballard said many able candidates who might have filed for office will not do so this year because they would not be able to live up to the law.

In local elections where little or no money will be spent campaigning, an affidavit certifying less than $500 total will be spent by the candidate or his committee, Ballard said.

A standard form for this will be available soon, he said, and should be no problem.

The law requires that every investment of the husband, wife or minor child over $100 be listed by business or company name. The dollar amount is not required, but, even so, at least one candidate has refused to run for office, Ballard said.

He said he knew of one man who, while not rich, had a large number of investments. This man, Ballard said, would not run because if his investments were made known, people would think he was rich, even though the total investment was not very large.

Another section of the law requires that names and addressses of givers of gifts of more than $100 to any family member in the past year be listed, as well as the names and addresses of payers of more than $100 in income to any family member.

Ballard said this apparently requires things such as "the wife's employer, junior's paper route and the grandparents who

Flasher lights approved

SCOTT CITY — The Missouri Public Service Commission has approved the installation of flasher lights at three railroad crossings in the city and the closing of two others, Mayor Clifford Campbell said Tuesday.

Campbell said the city received official word Tuesday.

Flasher lights will be installed at the Louis, Daugherty and Oak Street crossings. Crossings at Delmar and Crites streets will be closed.

Plans call for the St. Louis-Southwestern Railway Company to bear the full cost of installation of lights at the Daugerty Street crossing and 10 percent of the cost at the Oak Street crossing. The city will pay for lights at the Louis Street crossing with aid from the Federal Safe Roads Program.

Estimated costs of the lights are $37,860 for the Louis Street crossing, $33,870 at Daugherty Street and $33,160 at the Oak Street crossing.

At the Louis Street crossing the city will purchase the lights and finance the installation, which will be performed by the railroad. Title to the lights will be held by the railroad.

Action by the PSC came after it had held two public hearings in Jefferson City and Benton.

At the public hearing at Benton in December, several Scott City businessmen opposed the closing of the crossings and the installation of flasher lights because they felt the moves would inconvenience them.

Untangling a three-car accident is a lousy way to spend a rainy afternoon, as Sgt. Thurman Burns discovered Tuesday. This accident occurred about 12:55 p.m. at the intersection of Malone Avenue and New Madrid Street, when a car driven north on New Madrid, by Donald Culbertson, 231 Daniel St., struck the side of a westbound car driven by Carl Forbis, 245 E. Gladys St. The Forbis car was knocked into the side of a car driven south on New Madrid by Sherry Brewer, 349 School St. Police said Culbertson stopped at the stop light, apparently thought the light changed and started through the interssection, hitting the Forbis car. The Brewer car was stopped at the light, also. No one was injured. (Daily Standard photo)

School orchestra to present concert

The Sikeston High School Orchestra will present its annual winter concert Thursday at 7:30 p..m. in the high school cafetorium

We are saddened today by the death of our good friend, Charlie Henson, whom we quoted quite a few times as the Lord Mayor of North Dogtrot. When he had his health and was able he furnished quail and other sporting goods to us and he asked no pay for them and wouldn't except it. Of course, the last years of his life he has been crippled, diabetic, lost a leg and he was going to lose another one right away, when the Lord saw fit to take him home. We know that he is right up there where the big ones ought to be. We extend our sympathy to his son.

ARMS AND AMERICA'S FUTURE

"Unless we are prepared to defend portoins of the world lying outside of North America, we shall soon find ourselves with nothing else but North America to defend."

A sobering thought from a man who knows: Secretary of Defense James R. Schlesinger. In a speech before the Economic Club of New York on January 22, Schlesinger painted a grim picture of current U.S. military — or, rather, anti-military — trends, and where those trends could lead.

"In the next fiscal year ... Defense Department expenditures will represent about 5 per cent of capacity output — the lowest point since the pre-Korean demobilization," says Schlesinger. "Since the 1968 fiscal year the Army has been cut almost precisely in half ... In the forthcoming fiscal year, the U.S. Navy will dip below 500 ships in the active fleet, a level lower than at any time since 1939 — two years before Pearl Harbor."

No one should be surprised at where the Soviet Union has been heading in the meantime. "Today ... the Soviet Union is outspending the United States on defense by 20 per cent — by 25 per cent if pensions are dropped out," explains the Defense Secretary. "In every meaningful category of defense expenditures the Soviets outspend the U.S."

No thinking person can believe that these trends will continue indefinitely — given Russia's global ambitions — without this country and the West as a whole coming to grief.

As Schlesinger correctly notes, the era of political and economic instability currently facing the world is traceable in no small measure to "an erosion of belief in American power and purpose." Sufficient arms are absolutely necessary to maintain a world-wide military equilibrium which, in Schlesinger's words, "is essential to the American society as we know it today."

These are not easy times to talk of increasing government spending for any purpose. However, if we Americans fail to make the necessary sacrifices to keep our defense competitive with the Soviet Union's, the consequences for us and the free world will be truly horrendous.

AIR YOUR PUBLICITY

"The television news release is one of the most effective, yet one of the least known weapons in the public relations arsenal," says the Wall Street Journal. "The nation's TV stations are often willing and sometimes eager to air company-made film clips during their news broadcasts."

The reason for the stations' attitude is simple: That have time on their hands-and on their screens-especially since some have recently expanded their local newscasts. All a company has to do is supply a short film and an accompanying script to a station. These films are subtle pitches and often are indistinguishable from news that a station's own staff has gathered.

A film release can't be edited or altered very easily whereas a newspaper rewrite man can edit out the commercial aspects of a printed release. "If it appears on just one metropolitan TV station," a public rleations man said, "we consider we've paid for the costs of the film."

A housewife turned race-car driver and sponsored by STP was filmed for TV newscasts. Air time given her exceeded $40,000 yet the clip cost STP only $2,572 to produce.

FEDERAL HANDOUTS FOR UNEMPLOYED ISN'T ANSWER

Good old Congress embarked on still another budget-busting spree by giving overhwelming approval to a $5.5 billion bill that authorizes 330,000 new "public service jobs" by mid-1975 and extends further "emergency aid" to the nation's unemplyoed.

But despite the fact that the situation for the nation's six million unemployed is hardly as bleak as the politicians would have most believe, most members of Congress were reluctant to be pictured as heartless foes of the "needy."

Consider the auto workers, 200,000 of whom have been laid off. Columnist Nick Thimmesch reported on the little-known fact that the unemployed auto workers are entitled to 95 per cent of their takehome pay.

Under an agreement extracted from the companies by the United Auto Workers, a "Supplemental Unemployment Benefits" plan provides that the auto makers will make up the difference between state unemployment benefits and 95 per cent of the worker's takehome pay -- less $7.50. If the employe has six months; seniority, he gets his "SUB" benefits for 26 weeks. If state unemployment benefits run out sooner than his 26 or 52 weeks, the company picks up the tab.

Then Thammesch explains: "A married assembly line worker with two children makes the standard $5.93 an hour, earns $237.20 a week. After federal, state, local and Social Security taxes, he takes home $178.44 If he's unemployed, Michigan pays him $98 in unemployment benefits and his auto company pays him another $82.94 for a total of $170.94 a week. He's supposed to report that $72.94 as income (for tax) but he might not.

"And he can use those free weeks to go hunting, fix the roof, do repairs around the house, even take a part-time job. The point is he makes nearly as much money as when he is working."

Thus the lot of the auto worker isn't nearly as dismal as the TV reports would indicate.

But both the auto companies and the United Auto workers must now realize that the real boss is the consumer -- and when the price of an auto is too high, in his or her estimation, there are less sales. That is part of the lesson most of us are again learning the hard way.

AGRICULTURAL REVOLUTION

Mr. George F. Will, writing in National Review, discusses the astounding revolution in U.S. agriculture that, almost unnoticed, changed the face of America. "In 1945," he says, ' 'one third of the labor force was on farms. And then came one of the most astonishing migrations in history. From 1945 until the mid-Sixties a million people moved from farms to cities each year -- about 2,750 a day." The heavy migration from farm to city between 1945 and the 1960's was accompanied by "A revolutionary increase in farm productivity..." -- and sharp increases in the average American's standard of living. Today, on the average, we spend around 17 per cent of our incomes on food. In Western Europe, the figure runs as high as 30 per cent for diets with protein contents inferior to ours. As Mr. Will puts it, "Americans are eating better for less of their incomes, and they are complaining furiously."

Meanwhile, agriculture may become an overworked horse. Highly- productive, private enterprise agriculture in the U.S. is working to fill food gaps in areas of the world that have been plagued by the inefficiencies of government - owned and managed economies.

ANTI-INFLATION OBJECTIVES

Practically everybody is against inflation. Yet, in combatting this officially- designated Public Enemy Number One, there has been no definition of the set of economic conditions we would like to see emerge in it s place. We are engaged in a national discussion of methods for conducting the war against inflation without a clear conception of the objectives of that war.

Inflation is popularly defined as a rising trend in the general price level. We will not quarrel with that definition, although some do. At present, the price level is rising at a yearly rate of (to use a round figure) 10 per cent. What sort of a price trend would we like to see emerge as the mark of victory in the war against inflation?

Here we will list five possible objectives of the national anti-inflation effort without trying to choose among them. Our list starts with the most ambitious conceivable objective, and ends with the most modest:

1. Reverse inflation. The idea is that, instead of the steeply rising trend in prices, we should seek to create conditions in which the price level would trend downward. One version of that proposal is that money wage rates could be kept steady, and the gains from rising productivity taken in the form of lower prices. In that way, real wageswould rise just as truly as they do when money wages increase while prices are held steady. In addition, under this plan persons on fixed incomes would share in productivity gains.

Even as recently as 10 years ago, one could point to important sectors of the economy in which the price trend had been downward. If the overall price trend had a slight upward tilt, it was because this was counterbalanced by price increases in the service sectors . It is only because of the experience of the last decade that we are inclined, at first view, to regard the reverse-inflation objective as unrealistic.

2. Zero inflation. The second conceivable objective in our war against inflation is to keep the price level flat. This should not be viewed doctrinairely in terms of an absolute zero rate of increase in some chosen price indicator — our price statistics are not that trustworthy. But, give or take one or two percentage points in the annual rate of climb, we have here a reasonable defintion of the zero-inflation objective.

This too is not an entirely unrealistic target. It is in fact a close enough description of what actually happened in the interval between the end of the Korean War and the beginning of the guns-and-butter period of the late 1960s.

3. Inflation at a reduced rate. Instead of trying to stop completely the upward climb of prices, we should try to slow it down to a more tolerable rate. Instead of the present 10 per cent annual rate of, say 5 per cent. this is probably the most popular view at present.

4. Inflation at a steady rate. The thought here is that we shouldn't try to reduce the 10 per cent inflation rate to a lower figure. That would be too painful. We should learn to live with the present rate of inflation but strive to keep it from getting any worse. In defense of this view, it might be argued that if inflation proceeds at a steady foreseeable rate those affected can protect themselves against it. Once everyone has come to accept this state of affairs, all commitments for the future can contain protective clauses.

Let inflation go. This is the proposal that we should not try to do anything to suppress inflation, even if it begins to be worse than 10 per cent. The idea is that, by trying to do something about inflation, the authorities may do more harm than good. The purpose of economy, it could be argued, is to produce goods and services in a steady stream, and not to create any particular trends in the price level. So — accept inflation at whatever rate it may turn out to be and live with it. This is of course a non-objective rather than an objective. We do not hear any substantial group arguing for this approach, but we sense that it may be waiting in the wings.

In enumerating the five options in the choice of anti-inflationary objectives, one disturbing thought emerges. One can observe, in the minds of both the public and the politicians, a tendency to move along the scale of the alternative choices. There has been a steady movement toward greater tolerance for inflation.

A generation ago, reverse inflation would have been widely regarded as a live option. A few years ago, zero inflation was conceived as the obvious objective. Now it seems that most people are willing to go along with the idea that the objective should be to slow inflation, not necessarily to a zero rate, but to something below it present 10 per cent.

Are we going to see this progression of the prevailing opinion go further in the same direction? Will people come to say that 10 per cent inflation is all right, provided it is kept from getting worse? And will they finally give up the fight entirely and let inflation be whatever it will?

Always the Gentlemen: How State Dept. Helped Soviets Free Key KGB Agent from American Prison

WASHINGTON — Some Central Intelligence Agency officials expect an outcry to whirlwind up against CIA industrial espionage in friendly as well as "detente" nations. There will be a flurry of action inside some intelligence "stations." "Spooks" will be sent packing. "Covers" will be blown. And the U.S. industrial-military complex will be limping in a strategic field wherein it should be the swiftest.

As one source, intimately familiar with intelligence gathering, ruefully put it recently- it will cost us millions of dollars to obtain the kind of secrets in the U.S.S.R. which any Soviet agent can pick up for a dollar on any American newsstand selling technical magazines.

Further, said he and he sure does know, the U.S. is being inundated by Soviet KGB agents.

They come in on Soviet vessels which now berth in 40 American ports. Of course, they come in among the thousands of commercial, cultural and scientific exchange commissions. Sometimes the U.S. even dispatches federal specialists to Russia, as was the case with the Department of Commerce, to explain intricacies of technical government operations. One such Commerce expert went to Moscow recently to report on our vast statistical services.

Furthermore, in order not to irritate the Russians and depress them during detente, we always play the gentlemen. For example, last Dec. 16 the very polished and elusive Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for European Affairs John A. Armitage flew into Newark, N.J. -- hardly a destination, usually, for so distinguished a diplomat. Mr. Armitage then went directly to the federal building. He met U.S. Attorney for New Jersey Jonathan Goldstein.

Then they went into federal court and asked the judge to put aside the 20-year espionage sentence of one Igor Ivanov. This is strange, since the last report had it that Mr. Ivanov was in Moscow supposedly driving a taxi, haradly an affair of state.

So there's need for a flashback. On Oct. 29, 1963, Ivanov, then a chauffeur for the Soviet's Amtorg Trading Crop., was arrested along with two other Russians. The FBI later proved to the courts that they had been obtaining classified secrets on Strategic Air Command computerized communications and counterstrike operations. Two of the Russians had diplomatic immunity. They had been assigned to the United Nations. They returned to the U.S.S.R.

But Ivanov, as a chauffeur for the trading corporation, was just an alien spy. So to prison he went. Then he sought release. The Russians sent word they'd truly appreciate his being permitted to leave prison and return to Moscow while on appeal. If his appeal were rejected by a higher court, why then, Ivanov simply would return voluntarily to prison. That was in 1971.

But on Dec. 16, 1974, the State Department, in the person of Mr. Armitage, and the Justice Department, in the person of John Goldstein (brooding all the way), asked the federal judge in New Jersey to set the whole thing aside. Why?

All in the interests of detente, that's why. Mr. Goldstein is more tight-lipped than a frozen clam. Ask Mr. Armitage what it's all about, he muttered as graciously as he could for a man who had been pressured by superiors into doing what he obviously found distasteful.

Seven times I tried to ask Mr. Armitage. He did not return the call. And Igor Ivanov did not return to the U.S. His sentence was simply wiped out. Yet Ivanov is one of the Soviets' most important intelligence officers. Somewhat like the late British-born Rudolf Ivanovich Abel.

There is evidence that Ivanov's arrest in 1963 desperately upset the KGB when it learned of the capture by the FBI from a cable sent to Moscow by the KGB "rap" or resident officer, Bores Ivanov. At least two former American ambassadors to Moscow can attest to this.

The electronic and photographic equipment discovered in Igor Ivanov's living quarters proved he was deep in industrial as well as military espionage. The secret computer system was an I.T.T. development.

Question therefore is, why should the State Department -- and on whose orders -- do this favor for the Russians? Certainly the Soviets don't exactly quiver over having to break their word. Ivanov simply could have gone underground in Moscow. But if the threat of another 13 years in American prison is removed, Igor may return in some new guise in some new trade mission.

The Soviet agents are all over us. For example, when Khrushchev ran Moscow for the party during the most brutal of Stalinist purges (see his book : "Khrushchev Remembers") one of his favorite aides was a chap by name of Potalechev (spelled phonetically). The latter was a tough purger. Yet up he turned as head of the Soviet foreign trade trust with whom scores of our top industrialists have conferred.

And there is the former Soviet secret police (KGB) chief Alexandr Shelepin. It has been charted that the KGB(all the way back to the Cheka days) was a killer machine. Yet now Shelepin is chairman of the Soviets' so-called labor federation conferring with national union leaders in Germany and with labor visitors from many lands. Just two examples.

They could be geometrically multiplied by the thousands. True, some are being monitored by the CIA and the FBI. So is some of the industrial equipment the Soviets are purchasing.

But under today's circumstances, our industrial counterespionage will be circumspect. Our spooks, domestic and international, might as well come in out of the cold. No sense being beastly about it. The Soviets might resent our intelligence people getting in their way.

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
Demetracopoulos Case

By JACK ANDERSON
with
Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — Now that the Greek dictatorship has collapsed, the story can be told how the White House and Justice Department connived to send a Greek exile home to certain torture and possible death.

The exile was newspaper editor Elias Demetracopoulos, who was driven from his homeland by the military junta in 1967. But the Greek colonels couldn't silence his typewriter.

He obtained resident status in the United States and took up battle station in Washington, pounding away at the junta and its Greek-American supporters.

The Nixon crowd in Washington zeroed in on him when he began firing volleys at Thomas Pappas, a millionaire with vast oil, soft-drink and chemical interests in Greece. Pappas also happened to be a close frinend and financial backer of President Nixon.

So close was the Nixon-Pappas tie that the Watergate conspirators instinctively turned to the Greek tycoon for hush money, although he insists he never provided a penny for such purposes.

On July 12, 1971, Demetracopoulos appeared before a House Foreign Affairs subcommittee and accused Pappas of helping to manipulate U.S. foreign policy in favor of the Greek dictatorship.

Before the testimony could be printed, a Justice Department lawyer showed up at the subcommittee and asked for Demetracopoulos' statement. Those were the days, of course, when Atty. Gen. John Mitchell was riding high at the Justice Department.

Demetracopoulos found out Mitchell's motive from Louise Gore, a friend with stong Republican credentials, who had encountered the attorney general at a Perle Mesta party. Ms. Gore had been appointed by Nixon to be ambassador to UNESCO and expected she would need his support for a subsequent bid for the Maryland governorship. She had the courage , nevertheless, to alert Demetracopoulos.

"I went to Perle's luncheon for Martha Mitchell yesterday," wrote Ms. Gore, "and sat next to John (Mitchell). He is furious at you -- and your testimony against Pappas. He kept threatening to have you deported!! ...

"He (kept) asking me what I knew about you and why we were friends. It really got out of hand. It was all he'd talk about during lunch and everyone at the table was listening."

The editor-in-exile received a more direct warning from President Nixon's personal troubleshooter, the late Murray Chotiner. As Demetracopoulos remembers it, Chotiner advised him to ease up on Pappas. "You can be in trouble . You can be deported. It's mot smart politics. You know Tom Pappas is a friend of the President."

Ten days after the warning, the brave editor, undeterred, blasted Pappas again in a memo to the House subcommittee. The memo detailed Pappas' relations with both the junta and the Nixon Administration, accusing Pappas of profiting from both. Later, Demetracopoulos encountered Pappas at the Sans Souci restaurant, a favorite hangout of White Houe gourmets. Demetracopoulos alleges that Pappas fumed at him, suggesting he could get in trouble with the Wall Street investment firm which provided Demetracopoulos with a livelihood.

Not long afterward, the FBI visited his Wall Street employer and made inquiries about the Greek exile. The FBI declined comment but Justice sources insist that, despite appearances, the FBI visit to Wall Street was not triggered by Mitchell and was unrelated to Pappas.

The Greek secret police, the KYP, meanwhile began questioning Demetracopoulos' former friends. The purpose, according to sources now able to speak about the junta days, was to get information to help the United States deport Demetracopoulos.

The Greek secret police allegedly told those they interviewed that they were "just helping out the CIA," which gave them financial support. By an interesting coincidence, Mitchell was on the CIA's governing 40 Committee at the time of the KYP inquiries.

Before the embattled exile could be deported and turned over to the mercy of the junta, the Watergate scandal forced Mitchell out of politics and, in time, the Greek dictatorship fell. Now for the first time in eight years, Demetracopoulos is returning to his beloved Greece, not as a deportee facing torture but as a patriot.

Footnote: We were unable to reach Mitchell or Pappas for comment. Ms. Gore told us that, despite the risk to her political career, she would warn Demetracopoulos again if she had it to do over.

Therefore, he intends to be a champion for the common people during the economic crisis he sees ahead ... Dr. Morris Chafetz, the contentious head of the federal antialcoholism effort, has stopped a promising treatment program for government employes with drinking problems. Hartke demanded a report from Gregory within 30 days on what he has done to get Detroit to justify lighter, more dangerous bumpers.

ARMS AND AMERICA'S FUTURE

"Unless we are prepared to defend portoins of the world lying outside of North America, we shall soon find ourselves with nothing else but North America to defend."

A sobering thought from a man who knows: Secretary of Defense James R. Schlesinger. In a speech before the Economic Club of New York on January 22, Schlesinger painted a grim picture of current U.S. military — or, rather, anti-military — trends, and where those trends could lead.

"In the next fiscal year ... Defense Department expenditures will represent about 5 per cent of capacity output — the lowest point since the pre-Korean demobilization," says Schlesinger. "Since the 1968 fiscal year the Army has been cut almost precisely in half ... In the forthcoming fiscal year, the U.S. Navy will dip below 500 ships in the active fleet, a level lower than at any time since 1939 — two years before Pearl Harbor."

No one should be surprised at where the Soviet Union has been heading in the meantime. "Today ... the Soviet Union is outspending the United States on defense by 20 per cent — by 25 per cent if pensions are dropped out," explains the Defense Secretary. "In every meaningful category of defense expenditures the Soviets outspend the U.S."

No thinking person can believe that these trends will continue indefinitely — given Russia's global ambitions — without this country and the West as a whole coming to grief.

As Schlesinger correctly notes, the era of political and economic instability currently facing the world is traceable in no small measure to "an erosion of belief in American power and purpose." Sufficient arms are absolutely necessary to maintain a world-wide military equilibrium which, in Schlesinger's words, "is essential to the American society as we know it today."

These are not easy times to talk of increasing government spending for any purpose. However, if we Americans fail to make the necessary sacrifices to keep our defense competitive with the Soviet Union's, the consequences for us and the free world will be truly horrendous.

AIR YOUR PUBLICITY

"The television news release is one of the most effective, yet one of the least known weapons in the public relations arsenal," says the Wall Street Journal. "The nation's TV stations are often willing and sometimes eager to air company-made film clips during their news broadcasts."

The reason for the stations' attitude is simple: That have time on their hands-and on their screens-especially since some have recently expanded their local newscasts. All a company has to do is supply a short film and an accompanying script to a station. These films are subtle pitches and often are indistinguishable from news that a station's own staff has gathered.

A film release can't be edited or altered very easily whereas a newspaper rewrite man can edit out the commercial aspects of a printed release. "If it appears on just one metropolitan TV station," a public rleations man said, "we consider we've paid for the costs of the film."

A housewife turned race-car driver and sponsored by STP was filmed for TV newscasts. Air time given her exceeded $40,000 yet the clip cost STP only $2,572 to produce.

FEDERAL HANDOUTS FOR UNEMPLOYED ISN'T ANSWER

Good old Congress embarked on still another budget-busting spree by giving overhwelming approval to a $5.5 billion bill that authorizes 330,000 new "public service jobs" by mid-1975 and extends further "emergency aid" to the nation's unemplyoed.

But despite the fact that the situation for the nation's six million unemployed is hardly as bleak as the politicians would have most believe, most members of Congress were reluctant to be pictured as heartless foes of the "needy."

Consider the auto workers, 200,000 of whom have been laid off. Columnist Nick Thimmesch reported on the little-known fact that the unemployed auto workers are entitled to 95 per cent of their takehome pay.

Under an agreement extracted from the companies by the United Auto Workers, a "Supplemental Unemployment Benefits" plan provides that the auto makers will make up the difference between state unemployment benefits and 95 per cent of the worker's take-home pay -- less $7.50. If the employe has six months; seniority, he gets his "SUB" benefits for 26 weeks. If state unemployment benefits run out sooner than his 26 or 52 weeks, the company picks up the tab.

Then Thammesch explains: "A married assembly line worker with two children makes the standard $5.93 an hour, earns $237.20 a week. After federal, state, local and Social Security taxes, he takes home $178.44 If he's unemployed, Michigan pays him $98 in unemployment benefits and his auto company pays him another $82.94 for a total of $170.94 a week. He's supposed to report that $72.94 as income (for tax) but he might not.

"And he can use those free weeks to go hunting, fix the roof, do repairs around the house, even take a part-time job. The point is he makes nearly as much money as when he is working."

Thus the lot of the auto worker isn't nearly as dismal as the TV reports would indicate.

But both the auto companies and the United Auto workers must now realize that the real boss is the consumer -- and when the price of an auto is too high, in his or her estimation, there are less sales. That is part of the lesson most of us are again learning the hard way.

There was aneat bit of wit in U.S. Rep. James Symingtron's response to a reporter's question concerning Warren Hearnes' announcement of his candidacy for the U.S. Senate presently held by Stuart Symington.

Said the senator's son: "I tend to support the incumbent."

General press consensus of President Ford's new energy conservation program is that it is not in the best interest of the people or nation. A normally GOP oriented publication says, it "represents a complete reversal of his stance three months ago and promises to promote an upsurge in inflation as well as to create hardships on American workers."

AGRICULTURAL REVOLUTION

Mr. George F. Will, writing in National Review, discusses the astounding revolution in U.S. agriculture that, almost unnoticed, changed the face of America. "In 1945," he says, ' 'one third of the labor force was on farms. And then came one of the most astonishing migrations in history. From 1945 until the mid-Sixties a million people moved from farms to cities each year -- about 2,750 a day." The heavy migration from farm to city between 1945 and the 1960's was accompanied by "A revolutionary increase in farm productivity..." -- and sharp increases in the average American's standard of living. Today, on the average, we spend around 17 per cent of our incomes on food. In Western Europe, the figure runs as high as 30 per cent for diets with protein contents inferior to ours. As Mr. Will puts it, "Americans are eating better for less of their incomes, and they are complaining furiously."

Meanwhile, agriculture may become an overworked horse. Highly- productive, private enterprise agriculture in the U.S. is working to fill food gaps in areas of the world that have been plagued by the inefficiencies of government - owned and managed economies.

ANTI-INFLATION OBJECTIVES

Practically everybody is against inflation. Yet, in combatting this officially- designated Public Enemy Number One, there has been no definition of the set of economic conditions we would like to see emerge in it s place. We are engaged in a national discussion of methods for conducting the war against inflation without a clear conception of the objectives of that war.

Inflation is popularly defined as a rising trend in the general price level. We will not quarrel with that definition, although some do. At present, the price level is rising at a yearly rate of (to use a round figure) 10 per cent. What sort of a price trend would we like to see emerge as the mark of victory in the war against inflation?

Here we will list five possible objectives of the national anti-inflation effort without trying to choose among them. Our list starts with the most ambitious conceivable objective, and ends with the most modest:

1. Reverse inflation. The idea is that, instead of the steeply rising trend in prices, we should seek to create conditions in which the price level would trend downward. One version of that proposal is that money wage rates could be kept steady, and the gains from rising productivity taken in the form of lower prices. In that way, real wageswould rise just as truly as they do when money wages increase while prices are held steady. In addition, under this plan persons on fixed incomes would share in productivity gains.

Even as recently as 10 years ago, one could point to important sectors of the economy in which the price trend had been downward. If the overall price trend had a slight upward tilt, it was because this was counterbalanced by price increases in the service sectors . It is only because of the experience of the last decade that we are inclined, at first view, to regard the reverse-inflation objective as unrealistic.

2. Zero inflation. The second conceivable objective in our war against inflation is to keep the price level flat. This should not be viewed doctrinairely in terms of an absolute zero rate of increase in some chosen price indicator — our price statistics are not that trustworthy. But, give or take one or two percentage points in the annual rate of climb, we have here a reasonable defintion of the zero-inflation objective.

This too is not an entirely unrealistic target. It is in fact a close enough description of what actually happened in the interval between the end of the Korean War and the beginning of the guns-and-butter period of the late 1960s.

3. Inflation at a reduced rate. Instead of trying to stop completely the upward climb of prices, we should try to slow it down to a more tolerable rate. Instead of the present 10 per cent annual rate of, say 5 per cent. this is probably the most popular view at present.

4. Inflation at a steady rate. The thought here is that we shouldn't try to reduce the 10 per cent inflation rate to a lower figure. That would be too painful. We should learn to live with the present rate of inflation but strive to keep it from getting any worse. In defense of this view, it might be argued that if inflation proceeds at a steady foreseeable rate those affected can protect themselves against it. Once everyone has come to accept this state of affairs, all commitments for the future can contain protective clauses.

Let inflation go. This is the proposal that we should not try to do anything to suppress inflation, even if it begins to be worse than 10 per cent. The idea is that, by trying to do something about inflation, the authorities may do more harm than good. The purpose of economy, it could be argued, is to produce goods and services in a steady stream, and not to create any particular trends in the price level. So — accept inflation at whatever rate it may turn out to be and live with it. This is of course a non-objective rather than an objective. We do not hear any substantial group arguing for this approach, but we sense that it may be waiting in the wings.

In enumerating the five options in the choice of anti-inflationary objectives, one disturbing thought emerges. One can observe, in the minds of both the public and the politicians, a tendency to move along the scale of the alternative choices. There has been a steady movement toward greater tolerance for inflation.

A generation ago, reverse inflation would have been widely regarded as a live option. A few years ago, zero inflation was conceived as the obvious objective. Now it seems that most people are willing to go along with the idea that the objective should be to slow inflation, not necessarily to a zero rate, but to something below it present 10 per cent.

Are we going to see this progression of the prevailing opinion go further in the same direction? Will people come to say that 10 per cent inflation is all right, provided it is kept from getting worse? And will they finally give up the fight entirely and let inflation be whatever it will?

Always the Gentlemen: How State Dept. Helped Soviets Free Key KGB Agent from American Prison

WASHINGTON — Some Central Intelligence Agency officials expect an outcry to whirlwind up against CIA industrial espionage in friendly as well as "detente" nations. There will be a flurry of action inside some intelligence "stations." "Spooks" will be sent packing. "Covers" will be blown. And the U.S. industrial-military complex will be limping in a strategic field wherein it should be the swiftest.

As one source, intimately familiar with intelligence gathering, ruefully put it recently- it will cost us millions of dollars to obtain the kind of secrets in the U.S.S.R. which any Soviet agent can pick up for a dollar on any American newsstand selling technical magazines.

Further, said he and he sure does know, the U.S. is being inundated by Soviet KGB agents.

They come in on Soviet vessels which now berth in 40 American ports. Of course, they come in among the thousands of commercial, cultural and scientific exchange commissions. Sometimes the U.S. even dispatches federal specialists to Russia, as was the case with the Department of Commerce, to explain intricacies of technical government operations. One such Commerce expert went to Moscow recently to report on our vast statistical services.

Furthermore, in order not to irritate the Russians and depress them during detente, we always play the gentlemen. For example, last Dec. 16 the very polished and elusive Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for European Affairs John A. Armitage flew into Newark, N.J. -- hardly a destination, usually, for so distinguished a diplomat. Mr. Armitage then went directly to the federal building. He met U.S. Attorney for New Jersey Jonathan Goldstein.

Then they went into federal court and asked the judge to put aside the 20-year espionage sentence of one Igor Ivanov. This is strange, since the last report had it that Mr. Ivanov was in Moscow supposedly driving a taxi, haradly an affair of state.

So there's need for a flashback. On Oct. 29, 1963, Ivanov, then a chauffeur for the Soviet's Amtorg Trading Crop., was arrested along with two other Russians. The FBI later proved to the courts that they had been obtaining classified secrets on Strategic Air Command computerized communications and counterstrike operations. Two of the Russians had diplomatic immunity. They had been assigned to the United Nations. They returned to the U.S.S.R.

But Ivanov, as a chauffeur for the trading corporation, was just an alien spy. So to prison he went. Then he sought release. The Russians sent word they'd truly appreciate his being permitted to leave prison and return to Moscow while on appeal. If his appeal were rejected by a higher court, why then, Ivanov simply would return voluntarily to prison. That was in 1971.

But on Dec. 16, 1974, the State Department, in the person of Mr. Armitage, and the Justice Department, in the person of John Goldstein (brooding all the way), asked the federal judge in New Jersey to set the whole thing aside. Why?

All in the interests of detente, that's why. Mr. Goldstein is more tight-lipped than a frozen clam. Ask Mr. Armitage what it's all about, he muttered as graciously as he could for a man who had been pressured by superiors into doing what he obviously found distasteful.

Seven times I tried to ask Mr. Armitage. He did not return the call. And Igor Ivanov did not return to the U.S. His sentence was simply wiped out. Yet Ivanov is one of the Soviets' most important intelligence officers. Somewhat like the late British-born Rudolf Ivanovich Abel.

There is evidence that Ivanov's arrest in 1963 desperately upset the KGB when it learned of the capture by the FBI from a cable sent to Moscow by the KGB "rap" or resident officer, Bores Ivanov. At least two former American ambassadors to Moscow can attest to this.

The electronic and photographic equipment discovered in Igor Ivanov's living quarters proved he was deep in industrial as well as military espionage. The secret computer system was an I.T.T. development.

Question therefore is, why should the State Department -- and on whose orders -- do this favor for the Russians? Certainly the Soviets don't exactly quiver over having to break their word. Ivanov simply could have gone underground in Moscow. But if the threat of another 13 years in American prison is removed, Igor may return in some new guise in some new trade mission.

The Soviet agents are all over us. For example, when Khrushchev ran Moscow for the party during the most brutal of Stalinist purges (see his book : "Khrushchev Remembers") one of his favorite aides was a chap by name of Potalechev (spelled phonetically). The latter was a tough purger. Yet up he turned as head of the Soviet foreign trade trust with whom scores of our top industrialists have conferred.

And there is the former Soviet secret police (KGB) chief Alexandr Shelepin. It has been charted that the KGB (all the way back to the Cheka days) was a killer machine. Yet now Shelepin is chairman of the Soviets' so-called labor federation conferring with national union leaders in Germany and with labor visitors from many lands. Just two examples.

They could be geometrically multiplied by the thousands. True, some are being monitored by the CIA and the FBI. So is some of the industrial equipment the Soviets are purchasing.

But under today's circumstances, our industrial counterespionage will be circumspect. Our spooks, domestic and international, might as well come in out of the cold. No sense being beastly about it. The Soviets might resent our intelligence people getting in their way.

JACK ANDERSON SAYS: Demetracopoulos Case

By JACK ANDERSON
with
Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — Now that the Greek dictatorship has collapsed, the story can be told how the White House and Justice Department connived to send a Greek exile home to certain torture and possible death.

The exile was newspaper editor Elias Demetracopoulos, who was driven from his homeland by the military junta in 1967. But the Greek colonels couldn't silence his typewriter.

He obtained resident status in the United States and took up battle station in Washington, pounding away at the junta and its Greek-American supporters.

The Nixon crowd in Washington zeroed in on him when he began firing volleys at Thomas Pappas, a millionaire with vast oil, soft-drink and chemical interests in Greece. Pappas also happened to be a close frinend and financial backer of President Nixon.

So close was the Nixon-Pappas tie that the Watergate conspirators instinctively turned to the Greek tycoon for hush money, although he insists he never provided a penny for such purposes.

On July 12, 1971, Demetracopoulos appeared before a House Foreign Affairs subcommittee and accused Pappas of helping to manipulate U.S. foreign policy in favor of the Greek dictatorship.

Before the testimony could be printed, a Justice Department lawyer showed up at the subcommittee and asked for Demetracopoulos' statement. Those were the days, of course, when Atty. Gen. John Mitchell was riding high at the Justice Department.

Demetracopoulos found out Mitchell's motive from Louise Gore, a friend with stong Republican credentials, who had encountered the attorney general at a Perle Mesta party. Ms. Gore had been appointed by Nixon to be ambassador to UNESCO and expected she would need his support for a subsequent bid for the Maryland governorship. She had the courage , nevertheless, to alert Demetracopoulos.

"I went to Perle's luncheon for Martha Mitchell yesterday," wrote Ms. Gore, "and sat next to John (Mitchell). He is furious at you -- and your testimony against Pappas. He kept threatening to have you deported!! ...

"He (kept) asking me what I knew about you and why we were friends. It really got out of hand. It was all he'd talk about during lunch and everyone at the table was listening."

The editor-in-exile received a more direct warning from President Nixon's personal troubleshooter, the late Murray Chotiner. As Demetracopoulos remembers it, Chotiner advised him to ease up on Pappas. "You can be in trouble . You can be deported. It's mot smart politics. You know Tom Pappas is a friend of the President."

Ten days after the warning, the brave editor, undeterred, blasted Pappas again in a memo to the House subcommittee. The memo detailed Pappas' relations with both the junta and the Nixon Administration, accusing Pappas of profiting from both. Later, Demetracopoulos encountered Pappas at the Sans Souci restaurant, a favorite hangout of White Houe gourmets. Demetracopoulos alleges that Pappas fumed at him, suggesting he could get in trouble with the Wall Street investment firm which provided Demetracopoulos with a livelihood.

Not long afterward, the FBI visited his Wall Street employer and made inquiries about the Greek exile. The FBI declined comment but Justice sources insist that, despite appearances, the FBI visit to Wall Street was not triggered by Mitchell and was unrelated to Pappas.

The Greek secret police, the KYP, meanwhile began questioning Demetracopoulos' former friends. The purpose, according to sources now able to speak about the junta days, was to get information to help the United States deport Demetracopoulos.

The Greek secret police allegedly told those they interviewed that they were "just helping out the CIA," which gave them financial support. By an interesting coincidence, Mitchell was on the CIA's governing 40 Committee at the time of the KYP inquiries.

Before the embattled exile could be deported and turned over to the mercy of the junta, the Watergate scandal forced Mitchell out of politics and, in time, the Greek dictatorship fell. Now for the first time in eight years, Demetracopoulos is returning to his beloved Greece, not as a deportee facing torture but as a patriot.

Footnote: We were unable to reach Mitchell or Pappas for comment. Ms. Gore told us that, despite the risk to her political career, she would warn Demetracopoulos again if she had it to do over.

WASHINGTON WHIRL: Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D.-Minn., has told friends he expected to be put out of action by cancer of the bladder. Instead, the cancer has been eliminated and he is in vigorous health. He has never been too religious, he has told friends, but he believes God may have spared him for a purpose. Therefore, he intends to be a champion for the common people during the economic crisis he sees ahead ... Dr. Morris Chafetz, the contentious head of the federal antialcoholism effort, has stopped a promising treatment program for government employes with drinking problems. By an interesting coincidence, the program was run by Dr. George Retholtz, who had once testified against Chafetz in a discrimination case ... In a fierce private letter to James Gregory, the federal auto safety chief, Senate Transportation Chairman Vance Hartke, D.-Ind., has said it is "completely unjustifiable" for Gregory to back down on rules requiring sturdier auto bumpers. Hartke demanded a report from Gregory within 30 days on what he has done to get Detroit to justify lighter, more dangerous bumpers.

Senate panels try again for alternative program

WASHINGTON (AP) — Foiled by high absenteeism in their first attempts, two Senate panels are trying again to come up with an alternative to President Ford's energy program.

The Senate Finance Committee and a special Democratic task force on energy hoped enough senators would show up today to allow work to proceed.

Ford in a news conference Tuesday night in Topeka, Kan., noted that Congress has failed to come up with an alternative to his program and declared: "I will not tolerate inaction. It is my judgment that the crisis is far too serious."

Absenteeism Tuesday thwarted the Senate Finance Committee from taking up a House-passed bill blocking Ford's $3-per-barrel tax on imported oil. Of the panel's 18 members, seven came to a scheduled meeting, three less than a quorum. The postponed meeting was to have been the first bill-drafting session following two days of hearings.

And the Democratic task force was unable to consider a proposed program calling for gradually increasing gasoline taxes to pay for developing new fuel sources. Three of its xseven sentators were there.

Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., chairman of the Finance Committee, said he was not embarrassed by the failure of his committee to muster a quorum. "The absentees are out doing the same thing the President is doing — out making speeches," he said.

Congress traditionally takes a week-long recess to mark Lincoln Day, but this year Senate leaders decided to forego the break because of what they said were pressing national problems of the economy and energy conservation. The House went ahead with its planned recess.

Unlike Ford's plan, which would raise fuel costs while the nation is attempting to fight recession, the proposals drafted by the staff of the Democratic force would phase in the higher gasoline tax only as unemployment drops.

House Democrats also are drafting an energy program which would have to be reconciled with any Senate plan before emerging as a full-scale alternative to Ford's proposals.

Before taking up any alternative energy conservation programs, Congress must first block Ford's proposals, Democrats say. The first step in the administration plan, a $1-per barrel tariff on imported oil, already is in effect. Other $1 increases are scheduled to go into effect March 1 and April 1.

Democrats who were absent from the task force's scheduled meeting were Herman E. Talmadge of Georgia, Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, Dale Bumpers of Arkansas and Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina.

Absentees at the Finance Committee were Talmadge; Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex.; William Hathaway, D-Maine; Bill Brock, R-Tenn.; Vance Hartke, D-Ind.; Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn.; Harry F. Byrd Jr., Ind-Va.; Mike Gravel, D-Alaska; Paul J. Fannin, R-Ariz.; Clifford P. Hansen, R-Wyo.; and William V. Roth Jr. R-Del.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said Senate opponents of Ford's energy program need only a few votes to be in a position to override a Presidential veto of legislation that would halt Ford's increased tariffs on imported oil.

"I don't want to give a head count, but we're within three or four votes of being able to override a veto," he said.

In place of a $3-a-barrel tariff on imported oil, Kennedy called for a plan to conserve gasoline useage.

The U.S. Military Academy's museum was established in 1854. It maintains what is probably the largest diversified collection of military arms and accoutrements in the Western hemisphere.

However, Bernard says he merely announced that applications were being accepted and that persons interested in making application should apply to the Jefferson City office no later than March 3.

8 injured in area accidents

Eight persons received injuries in for area traffic accidents Tuesday, the highway patrol announced today.

Elton Eugene Crawford, 40, of Kennett was seriously injured in a two-vehicle accident on Highway 25 three miles north of Kennett at 6:15 p.m.

Crawford was a passenger on a farm tractor driven north by Harold Busch, 15, of White Oak, when a northbound car driven by Alfred Lamar Harrington, 37, of Holcomb approached from behind and struck the left rear wheel of the tractor, breaking it into two pieces. Harrington said he did not see the tractor in time to avoid hitting it.

Busch received minor injuries, and he and Crawford both were taken to Dunklin County Memorial Hospital in Kennett.. Crawford later was transferred to Baptist Memorial Hospital in Memphis, Tenn.

Another two-vehicle Dunklin County accident on Highway 84 three miles east of Kennett at 9:10 p.m. resulted in serious injuries to a Hayti man.

The accident occurred when James West, 37, of Hayti lost control of his westbound car after applying his brakes to avoid a bicyclist, and the back of the vehicle skidded across the center line into the path of an eastbound station wagon driven by Charles Jackson Lewis, 47, of Hayti.

West also was taken to the Dunklin County hospital.

Heavy fog contributed to a two-car accident on Route H five miles north of Sikestoon at 7:15 p.m. in which three Sikeston Route Two teen-agers were injured.

The accident occurred when a westbound car driven by Robert S.Rister, 18, stalled while turning onto Route H from a side road and was struck broadside by a northbound car driven by Jerald Kenneth Hull, 21, as it came over the crest of a hill.

Rister and Charles William Hampton, 17, a passenger in Rister's car, and Doris Hull, 17, a passenger in the other vehicle all received minor injuries and were taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston.

An Elkhart Ind., couple wa injured at the Highway 60 -77 junction near Wyatt at 12:10 p.m.

Dennis Canen, 21, and his wife, Teresa Canen, 17, were traveling west on Highway 60 when a northbound pickup truck driven by Orval Shew, 56, of Wyatt pulled onto Highway 60 from Highway 77 and was struck in the right side by the Canen car. Shew had stopped at the stop sign but said he did not see the Canen vehicle approaching.

Mr. and Mrs. Canen were treated for minor injuries at Missouri Delta Community Hospital.

Before taking up any alternative energy conservation programs, Congress must first block Ford's proposals, Democrats say. The first step in the administration plan, a $1-per barrel tariff on imported oil, already is in effect. Other $1 increases are scheduled to go into effect March 1 and April 1.

Democrats who were absent from the task force's scheduled meeting were Herman E. Talmadge of Georgia, Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, Dale Bumpers of Arkansas and Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina.

Absentees at the Finance Committee were Talmadge; Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex.; William Hathaway, D-Maine; Bill Brock, R-Tenn.; Vance Hartke, D-Ind.; Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn.; Harry F. Byrd Jr., Ind-Va.; Mike Gravel, D-Alaska; Paul J. Fannin, R-Ariz.; Clifford P. Hansen, R-Wyo.; and William V. Roth Jr. R-Del.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said Senate opponents of Ford's energy program need only a few votes to be in a position to override a Presidential veto of legislation that would halt Ford's increased tariffs on imported oil.

"I don't want to give a head count, but we're within three or four votes of being able to override a veto," he said.

In place of a $3-a-barrel tariff on imported oil, Kennedy called for a plan to conserve gasoline useage.

The U.S. Military Academy's museum was established in 1854. It maintains what is probably the largest diversified collection of military arms and accoutrements in the Western hemisphere.

Applicants should write specialist

Persons interested in applying for the position of conservation agent should write to Personnel Specialist, Missouri Department of Conservation, Box 180, Jefferson City, Mo. 65101.

An article in Saturday's edition of The Daily Standard instructed interested persons to call Scott County Conservation Agent Arthur Bernard of Benton for information. However, Bernard says he merely announced that applications were being accepted and that persons interested in making application should apply to the Jefferson City office no later than March 3.

The accident occurred when a westbound car driven by Robert S.Rister, 18, stalled while turning onto Route H from a side road and was struck broadside by a northbound car driven by Jerald Kenneth Hull, 21, as it came over the crest of a hill.

Rister and Charles William Hampton, 17, a passenger in Rister's car, and Doris Hull, 17, a passenger in the other vehicle all received minor injuries and were taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston.

HILLBILLY WOMEN
By Kathy Kahn
Avon 20602-$1.25
Non-Fiction

"This book tells what it means to be a woman when you are poor, when you are proud, and when you are a hillbilly," writes Kathy Kahn, the author of HILLBILLY WOMEN. "This book says that the hillbilly women who are angry about their conditions are the rule rather than the exception."

HILLBILLY WOMEN is a history of modern Appalachia, of the coal camps, the mill towns, of miner's strikes and of hunger, as told by nineteen mountain women. Kathy Kahn interviewed these women, taped their stories, and then wrote them down just as they were spoken. The wives and daughters and widows of disabled or unemployed miners from Appalachia tell the stories of their fight for survival against the coal mines and textile mills which run their lives.

A writer and organizer from the North Georgia mountains, Kathy Kahn has written articles and reports on the Appalachian struggle which have appeared in New South, South Today, The Southern Patriot, and People's Appalachia. She has spoken and conducted workshops for groups at colleges and universities. As a banjo and mandolin player, Ms. Kahn sings both Old Time and Country and Western Music. She has two records, "The Working Girl: Women's Songs of Mountains, Mines and Mills," and "I'm Proud To Be A Hillbilly Woman."

The Statue of Liberty was a gift from the French to the Americans. Designed by Frederic Auguste Bartholdi, its true name is "Liberty Enlightening the World."

World news in brief

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The hospital ship SS Hope is headed for the scrap pile. The white ship, which traveled 250,000 miles and brought 20th century medicine to many underdeveloped nations, was towed out of the Philadelphia Naval Yard on Tuesday bound for Brownsville, Tex., where it will be scrapped. The Hope was retired 18 months ago when it became too costly to operate.

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Newark, sixth largest in the nation, says it is faced with a multimillion dollar budget deficit. Archbishop Peter L. Gerety told newsmen Tuesday that short-term loans and mortgages amounting to $25.3 million owed by the archdiocese are the major problem. He said costs for the current fiscal year amount to more than $35 million, but revenues come to only about $21 million.

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Like a barometer in reverse, the Yo-Yo reflects the way the economy isn't going. In these times of recession, the nation's largest Yo-Yo company is doing a booming business. "When times are tight, they don't have the money to buy basketballs, but they do have the money to buy Yo-Yos," explained William Reck, comptroller of Flambeau Products Corp., parent company of Duncan Yo-Yos.

JERUSALEM (AP) — Neither Israel nor Egypt gave any indication of modifying their positions as Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger carried his peace shuttle to Cairo today. U.S. sources said Israeli resolve was hardening and Kissinger encountered considerable resistance during his talks with Premier Yitzhak Rabin and leaders of his government. In Cairo, President Anwar Sadat repeated Egypt's demand for return of the Mitla and Gidi passes and the Abu Rudeis oil fields. He said Egypt could give the pledge of nonbelligerency demanded by Israel only as part of a final peace settlement.

TANANARIVE, Malagasy Republic (AP) — Malagasy's military rulers today accused dissident police forces on this big African island of assassinating President Richard Ratsimandrava. The president's car was ambushed Tuesday while Ratsimandrava was en route home. Two body guards and several assassins were also reported killed. A large military force surrounded the Antanimora police camp and the ruling junta called on Col. Brechard Rajaonarison to surrender. There were indications the army was preparing an attack.

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — President Chung Hee Park was expected to win a sizable victory today in the referendum he called to get a nationwide endorsement of his authoritarian rule. Despite calls for a boycott by opposition political groups and some church and civic organizations, it was generally conceded the final result would be a large majority in favor of the former general who has been in power since a bloodless coup in 1961.

LONDON (AP) — Margaret Thatcher, the first woman to head a major British political party, is promising a "new look and new sense of direction" for her battered Conservative forces. Observers predict she will turn the Tories to the right. The 49-year-old tax specialist and former research chemist was elected Tuesday by the Conservative members of the House of Commons to succeed former Prime Minister Edward Heath. She defeated four men, winning 149 votes to 79 for William Whitelaw, her closest competitor.

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — The Cambodian commander in chief says unless his forces receive the $222 million supplemental military aid sought by President Ford, it will lose the war before the year is out. "Even with more aid we cannot win, but we can hold the other side to a stalemate that may lead to negotiations," Gen. Sosthene Fernandez told The Associated Press in an interview.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — Martha Mitchell has asked state Supreme Court to speed her separation suit against former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell.

Mrs. Mitchell's attorney, Henry Rothblatt, said there is a "serious question concerning custody of the 14-year-old daughter. She is very much disturbed psychologically."

Margaret Shaw, Mitchell's lawyer, opposed early trial by citing Mitchell's appeal of conviction in the Watergate coverup trial and saying his "financial and personal status has not yet been resolved." She said the daughter, Marty, "went with her father by her own will."

Mrs. Mitchell has been receiving temporary alimony of $1,000 a week. She has said Mitchell brain-washed the child, who attends Sacred Heart Convent in Greenwich, Conn.

State Supreme Court Justice Manuel Gomez said Tuesday he would rule as soon as possible on the speedup request.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former West Virginia Gov. William Wallace Barron has been ordered paroled after serving nearly four years of a 12-year conspiracy sentence.

The U.S. Parole Board took the action Tuesday. It takes effect March 28. Barron, now at the federal prison camp at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., has been in federal custody 46 months and has paid a $50,000 fine.

He was convicted of conspiring to bribe the foreman of a federal grand jury that cleared him in a 1968 case involving alleged kickbacks while he was governor.

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Jean Lucey, wife of Gov. Patrick J. Lucey, is back at college studying journalism but says, "I really don't want any publicity on it."

"The kids don't know who I am," she says. "I'm paying full tuition and I'm not getting any special treatment. I'm not an employe of the state. I really feel strongly about my privacy."

Mrs. Lucey is taking classes in journalism and art history at the University of Wisconsin here. Classified now as a junior, she first attended college at the university's Milwaukee branch.

BUENOS AiRES, Argentina (AP) — President Isabel Peron has traveled to the world's southernmost city, Ushuaia, in her fourth change of location in little more than a month during Argentina's summer.

In a picturesque mountain area on the Beagle Canal, Ushuaia is at the tip of Argentina's continental territory about 1,600 miles south of Buenos Aires.

With Mrs. Peron were her private secretary and social welfare minister, Jose Lopez Rega, other officials, and friends.

Mrs. Peron, 44, left for Ushuaia on Tuesday from a vacation hotel in the Andean mountain city of Bariloche, to which she had flown from Buenos Aires last Friday.

HILLBILLY WOMEN
By Kathy Kahn
Avon 20602-$1.25
Non-Fiction

"This book tells what it means to be a woman when you are poor, when you are proud, and when you are a hillbilly," writes Kathy Kahn, the author of HILLBILLY WOMEN. "This book says that the hillbilly women who are angry about their conditions are the rule rather than the exception."

HILLBILLY WOMEN is a history of modern Appalachia, of the coal camps, the mill towns, of miner's strikes and of hunger, as told by nineteen mountain women. Kathy Kahn interviewed these women, taped their stories, and then wrote them down just as they were spoken. The wives and daughters and widows of disabled or unemployed miners from Appalachia tell the stories of their fight for survival against the coal mines and textile mills which run their lives.

A writer and organizer from the North Georgia mountains, Kathy Kahn has written articles and reports on the Appalachian struggle which have appeared in New South, South Today, The Southern Patriot, and People's Appalachia. She has spoken and conducted workshops for groups at colleges and universities. As a banjo and mandolin player, Ms. Kahn sings both Old Time and Country and Western Music. She has two records, "The Working Girl: Women's Songs of Mountains, Mines and Mills," and "I'm Proud To Be A Hillbilly Woman."

The Statue of Liberty was a gift from the French to the Americans. Designed by Frederic Auguste Bartholdi, its true name is "Liberty Enlightening the World."

World news in brief

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The hospital ship SS Hope is headed for the scrap pile. The white ship, which traveled 250,000 miles and brought 20th century medicine to many underdeveloped nations, was towed out of the Philadelphia Naval Yard on Tuesday bound for Brownsville, Tex., where it will be scrapped. The Hope was retired 18 months ago when it became too costly to operate.

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Newark, sixth largest in the nation, says it is faced with a multimillion dollar budget deficit. Archbishop Peter L. Gerety told newsmen Tuesday that short-term loans and mortgages amounting to $25.3 million owed by the archdiocese are the major problem. He said costs for the current fiscal year amount to more than $35 million, but revenues come to only about $21 million.

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Like a barometer in reverse, the Yo-Yo reflects the way the economy isn't going. In these times of recession, the nation's largest Yo-Yo company is doing a booming business. "When times are tight, they don't have the money to buy basketballs, but they do have the money to buy Yo-Yos," explained William Reck, comptroller of Flambeau Products Corp., parent company of Duncan Yo-Yos.

JERUSALEM (AP) — Neither Israel nor Egypt gave any indication of modifying their positions as Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger carried his peace shuttle to Cairo today. U.S. sources said Israeli resolve was hardening and Kissinger encountered considerable resistance during his talks with Premier Yitzhak Rabin and leaders of his government. In Cairo, President Anwar Sadat repeated Egypt's demand for return of the Mitla and Gidi passes and the Abu Rudeis oil fields. He said Egypt could give the pledge of nonbelligerency demanded by Israel only as part of a final peace settlement.

TANANARIVE, Malagasy Republic (AP) — Malagasy's military rulers today accused dissident police forces on this big African island of assassinating President Richard Ratsimandrava. The president's car was ambushed Tuesday while Ratsimandrava was en route home. Two body guards and several assassins were also reported killed. A large military force surrounded the Antanimora police camp and the ruling junta called on Col. Brechard Rajaonarison to surrender. There were indications the army was preparing an attack.

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — President Chung Hee Park was expected to win a sizable victory today in the referendum he called to get a nationwide endorsement of his authoritarian rule. Despite calls for a boycott by opposition political groups and some church and civic organizations, it was generally conceded the final result would be a large majority in favor of the former general who has been in power since a bloodless coup in 1961.

LONDON (AP) — Margaret Thatcher, the first woman to head a major British political party, is promising a "new look and new sense of direction" for her battered Conservative forces. Observers predict she will turn the Tories to the right. The 49-year-old tax specialist and former research chemist was elected Tuesday by the Conservative members of the House of Commons to succeed former Prime Minister Edward Heath. She defeated four men, winning 149 votes to 79 for William Whitelaw, her closest competitor.

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — The Cambodian commander in chief says unless his forces receive the $222 million supplemental military aid sought by President Ford, it will lose the war before the year is out. "Even with more aid we cannot win, but we can hold the other side to a stalemate that may lead to negotiations," Gen. Sosthene Fernandez told The Associated Press in an interview.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — Martha Mitchell has asked state Supreme Court to speed her separation suit against former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell.

Mrs. Mitchell's attorney, Henry Rothblatt, said there is a "serious question concerning custody of the 14-year-old daughter. She is very much disturbed psychologically."

Margaret Shaw, Mitchell's lawyer, opposed early trial by citing Mitchell's appeal of conviction in the Watergate coverup trial and saying his "financial and personal status has not yet been resolved." She said the daughter, Marty, "went with her father by her own will."

Mrs. Mitchell has been receiving temporary alimony of $1,000 a week. She has said Mitchell brain-washed the child, who attends Sacred Heart Convent in Greenwich, Conn.

State Supreme Court Justice Manuel Gomez said Tuesday he would rule as soon as possible on the speedup request.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former West Virginia Gov. William Wallace Barron has been ordered paroled after serving nearly four years of a 12-year conspiracy sentence.

The U.S. Parole Board took the action Tuesday. It takes effect March 28. Barron, now at the federal prison camp at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., has been in federal custody 46 months and has paid a $50,000 fine.

He was convicted of conspiring to bribe the foreman of a federal grand jury that cleared him in a 1968 case involving alleged kickbacks while he was governor.

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Jean Lucey, wife of Gov. Patrick J. Lucey, is back at college studying journalism but says, "I really don't want any publicity on it."

"The kids don't know who I am," she says. "I'm paying full tuition and I'm not getting any special treatment. I'm not an employe of the state. I really feel strongly about my privacy."

Mrs. Lucey is taking classes in journalism and art history at the University of Wisconsin here. Classified now as a junior, she first attended college at the university's Milwaukee branch.

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — President Isabel Peron has traveled to the world's southernmost city, Ushuaia, in her fourth change of location in little more than a month during Argentina's summer.

In a picturesque mountain area on the Beagle Canal, Ushuaia is at the tip of Argentina's continental territory about 1,600 miles south of Buenos Aires.

With Mrs. Peron were her private secretary and social welfare minister, Jose Lopez Rega, other officials, and friends.

Mrs. Peron, 44, left for Ushuaia on Tuesday from a vacation hotel in the Andean mountain city of Bariloche, to which she had flown from Buenos Aires last Friday.

Shots, antibiotics prove useless

Colds, flu are hard to beat

NEW YORK, N.Y.--The Sept. 15, 1974 issue of "Patient Care," a magazine for doctors, reported in an article that antibiotics cannot cure the widespread epidemic of colds or cold symptoms.

A group of doctors said in "How Much Work-Up for a Common Cold" that antibiotics can attack diseases caused by bacteria but the common cold is linked with viruses--and so far no cure has been found.

The group of physicians turned authors give several reasons for not relying heavily on cold medicines:

--Antiobiotics kill all bacteria in the body even if the bacteria is helpful to the body.

--Bacteria build up a resistance to antibiotics after long exposure. As a result, when you are sick with a bacterial infection, the antibiotic may be ineffective.

--Antibiotics sometimes cause allergic and harmful reactions.

--Antiobiotics are expensive to buy.

It is also doubtful if influenza shots quell sickness because flu strains are constantly changing and the shot's medicine may not match the strain the person is afflicted with.

However, complications such as pneumonia and bronchitis may develop from a cold which are bacterial in nature and therefore, may be treatable with antibiotics. Internists are more apt to prescribe antibiotics as preventive medicine for elderly people especially because they are more susceptible to those complications.

The best way to combat cold or flu is to have a physician diagnose after an examination whether a person is afflicted with a bacterial infection or a virus.

Meanwhile, an effective way to fight the common cold is to take aspirin, drink plenty of fluids and rest. Runny noses may be stopped by taking neo-synephrine for up to three days, the doctors report.

Ann Landers

Mom caught couple involved in love act

Dear Ann Landers: I read with interest your advice to the mother who signed herself "Numb." She walked in on her 17-year-old daughter and boyfriend and caught them in the act.

As the mother of five beautiful, dimpled, blonde girls, I'd be thankful that I caught them and not their dad. Fathers have a thing about daughters, you know.

If this happened to me I would ask my daughter and her boyfriend to go into another room and put on their clothes and then we'd have a talk -- the three of us. The following alternatives would be suggested:

1. Continue to have sex and risk pregnancy or taking the life of an unborn child by abortion.

2. Get married, when possibly the only attraction is sex, in which case the marriage would probably fail.

3. Agree to send our daughter to a doctor for proper instruction and the best method of birth control. (In essence, I'd be saying, "you're going to do it anyway. At least don't get pregnant.")

4. And now the tough one: I'd tell them they might decide that sex outside of marriage isn't right, but abstaining would take a lot of self-control and discipline. This means being alone as little as possible, more double-dating with another couple who don't neck and pet. Vow to abstain from kissing in a car or any other place where sex might be possible.

I'd then say, "You two must make the decision, but whatever it is, we will always love our daughter. We might be hurt but our love will still be there." -- Another Mother

Dear Mother: In my opinion, your approach is much more idealistic than realistic. Some teenagers might abstain for a while, but the odds for permanent abstinence are small. Along with the hope, trust and confidence, I'd make sure that daughter had plenty of information.

Dear Ann Landers: Last year at this time I was a secure, happy wife and mother. Today I sit here wondering if I can get together the money to pay my utility bill before they shut off the electricity and gas. The grocer has been wonderful about credit. He knows I must feed myself and the five-year-old twins.

Fourteen months ago I receved a phone call from a hospital across town. My husband was in critical condition. He had suffered a heart attack while driving home. By the time I reached the hospital he was gone. I couldn't believe it. The man had never had a sick day.

The ironic part of this story is that less than one month before he died I asked him to buy some life insurance. He refused, sayingthe smart thing to do is to keep his money in a savings account where it will produce interest.

When he died, the bank gave me the $2,200 he had in his savings account. If he had bought the life insurance policy I would have received $50,000.

I loved my husband dearly, but I can't help feeling resentful. After all, the children and I were HIS responsibility. He should have looked out for us. I hope you will print this letter. Maybe somebody will learn from it. -- His Widow

Dear Widow: Your husband made a mistake, which, unfortunately, you and the children are paying for. Put aside your resentment and accept the fact that he was not inconsiderate. He was ignorant.

Do you feel awkward, self-conscious -- lonely? Welcome to the club. There's help for you in Ann Landers's booklet, "The Key to Popularity." Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Dr. Lamb

Too much bunk about lecithin

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — What are we supposed to believe any more? For several years I have diligently watched my intake of certain foods. Except for foods such as cakes, cookies and pancakes, I have specifically avoided eggs, cheeses, butter, and whole milk.

Now, I read in the attached newspaper article that these are some of the very foods that would help to control cholesterol because of the lecithin in the egg yolks. What gives? What is lecithin?

Is it any wonder that the public is all mixed up where diets are concerned? One doctor advises to "count calories." Another says to "avoid carbohydrates." Another counsels "drinking eight glasses of water a day." Dr. Lamb, what are we supposed to believe any more?

DEAR READER — There are many commercial interests in the health field. There are also a lot of completely unqualified people and plain quacks pouring out a steady stream of misinformation to the public. I agree the public has ample reason to be confused.

The best I can tell you is to look to the person's qualifications or the qualifications of the source he quotes. As a case in point, the article advising lecithin you sent is based on ignorance. It is true, however, that cakes and cookies can be a source of fat and cholesterol. Years ago it was shown that you could inject lecithin into the bloodstream and it helped to clear the fats and cholesterol in the blood. Note that it was injected into the blood, not swallowed.

In fact, our own body manufactures lecithin to put into the bloodstream for these purposes. It is manufactured from different basic food blocks.

Now that is far different from swallowing things. Lecithin that is swallowed, not injected into the bloodstream, is digested and never absorbed into the body, let alone into the bloodstream as lecithin. Meanwhile, untold numbers of people read the kind of thing you sent me and waste their money on pills that could be better spent on good, wholesome food.

The limitation of fat, cholesterol, and calories to avoid obesity is the recommendation of a broad group of well-recognized scientists, including physicians and nutritionists. Their recommendations should be considered as from the best available source, as opposed to some untrained individual's unscientific opinion.

We have no method to control the kind of material printed and available to the public, as we do in the control of products, such as foods and drugs. That is the problem. Within the medical profession and associated disciplines, we have scientific journals. To publish something in these the article must be reviewed by a competent editorial board.

For this reason you will not read in these journals on nutrition or biochemistry or circulation any statement like you sent to me. The board will recognize at once the errors in such statements, and it will be rejected. Unfortunately, we have no way of doing this outside our scientific journals. To do so would involve a form of censorship that might be worse.

You may be interested to know that those people who have popularized no carbohydrates or eight glasses of water a day, or swallowing lecithin pills have never been able to do work of sufficient quality to be suitable for publication in a scientific journal.

Released funds will create 250,000 jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford is cautioning Americans to brace for a faster-than-forecast surge in unemployment but says the jobless rate will peak at under 10 per cent and gradually head downward before year's end.

The President's personal predictions on the closely watched indicator of the nation's recession came at a Topeka, Kan., news conference Tuesday night after he announced the release of $2 billion in frozen highway funds to spur 125,000 or more jobs in the hard-hit constrction industry.

Ford scheduled a late-morning meeting today with his top economic advisers to discuss unemployment and the reaction to his latest two-day trip in search of support for his economic and energy proposals.

Economic questions dominated Ford's second out-of-town news conference in a week, but there were these disclosures on other subjects:

—He believes "the possibility exists for a step-by-step progress in the Middle East" and that if Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger returns from his current Middle East mission "with some encouraging news ... he will probably go back shortly thereafter for what we would hope would be a settlement on a step-by-step basis."

—Ford repeated his warning that unless progress is made "there is a very serious prospect" of another Middle East war and oil embargo.

—The President, asked about the possibility of resigned President Richard M. Nixon returning to the national or diplomatic scene, said: "I see no prospect for any appointment because of his health ..."

—Ford defended his private 45-minute meeting this week with former Treasury Secretary John B. Connally, under indictment for perjury and bribery. "I see no conflict whatsoever," Ford said. Until Connally's case is resolved, "I think it is very appropriate for me to meet with him to discuss ... both domestic and foreign policy."

Ford skirted a direct response when asked whether he agreed with his economic advisers' forecast that unemployment will peak at 8.5 per cent about midsummer. The jobless rate soared to 8.2 per cent last month, the highest figure in more than three decades.

"My own personal feeling is that there may be some increases, but I think the hump will have been reached sooner than some of the experts are forecasting and that the trend will start in the other direction ..." the President said.

At one point, Ford said: "I don't want to get in a numbers game about what the unemployment figure might be at a certain date." But at another point he said AFL-CIO President George Meany "pulled that figure out of the air" when he predicted a 10 per cent jobless rate.

What's the law?

The case of the assaulted flyer

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Although Rosie wasn't very bright, she was accused of picking up things very fast. Charged with shoplifting, she was never, however, convicted.

Notwithstanding that fact, in a push against poachers, her name and picture was included when the police sent out a warning flyer to merchants containing the identities and mug shots of all persons arrested and-or convicted of shoplifting and describing them as active shoplifters.

Amid a river of tears, Rosie sued the police for violating her constitutional rights.

"I'm no shoplifter," she cried in court. "The flyer was an outrage and should have been shot down. When I was arrested, I was as innocent as Little Orphan Annie."

"In the fight against crime," responded the police in effect, "the public interest must come first. As for the flyer, it was merely a warning to merchants. Considering all the shoplifting going on around town, sending it out was the only step we could take to help them and was reasonable under the circumstances."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDTGE, would you shoot down the flyer as an infringement on Rosie's rights?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that law-enforcement officials, consistent with due process, cannot brand a person as a ciminal when he has never been convicted of any crime. Such actions on the part of law-enforcement officials unlawfully destroy a person's good name and cause him ecnomic and other damages.

The guilt or innocence of a person, concluded the judge, is a determination that can only be made in a court of law.

Former Sikeston man accepts Colorado post

WORCESTER, Mass. — Charles Jolliff, executive vice president of the Worcester Area Chamber of Commerce, announced today that he is resigning from his postion here, effective March 14, 1975, to become the executive vice president of the Colorado Springs, Colo., Chamber of Commerce.

Jolliff was general manager of the Sikeston Chamber of Commerce in 1953. He is a 1946 graduate of Arkansas University, where he received a Bachelor of Arts.

He has served the Worcester Area since 1964 — a period which included the largest building boon in Worcester's long and colorful history. Amont the major accomplishments and projects that have been realized during Jolliff's period of service here are: the University of Massachusetts Medical School and Teaching Hospital, record industrial development including five industrial parks, the organization of the Worcester Business Development Corporation, Worcester Center, a major breakthrough in transportation — 1-290, 52 and 190, establishment of full time Governmental and Human Service departments in the Chamber, an more recently, the attraction of three developers who are proposing to build a Civic Center in downtown Worcester.

Brewry stock favored in good times and bad

By CROCKETT SCOTT

"The cautious seldom err." ... Confucius

Though the bulls have been rampaging, SEC-registered stock market analysts suggest (in numerous instances) that it may be wiser to buy on the sell-off, than to rush headlong with at-the-market orders.

A stock which some St. Louis SEC-registered analysts like presently is the Standard & Poor's A-rated Anheuser Busch.

The famed brewery's common stock trades around 27 currently, having advanced from is 1974 low of 21.

This equity peaked at about 38 last year after a 1973 high of 55 or so and 69 a few years back.

Whether to jump in and buy the stock now is a question to be answered by a specialist in brewery stocks.

Most professional counselors suggest that Budweiser should sell in good times or bad. It is conceded that Anheuser Busch, like many other corporations big and small, suffered from inflation in recent months.

But, for the long term, many of the brokerage houses in St. Louis like the equity.

Though Bentley Laboratories seldom is mentioned in brokerage offices in the Midwest and Mid-South, some SEC-registered analysts look favorably upon Bentley for high risk accounts.

Bentley Labs, previously mentioned here, serves the medical profession and hospitals, particularly surgical needs. The company's common stock soared from about 22 or 23 to the middle 40s a few years ago when it first went public.

Earnings growth has been excellent; and the stock, though selling off to a low of 9 last year, held up much better than many over the counter stocks.

The firm's balance sheet (as noted by Standard & Poor's as of 11-30-73) showed cash or equivalent of $5.93 million and no long-term debt.

Current assets are $9.70 million, and current liabilities, $1.49 million (one should obtain a more recent statement of the balance sheet).

The stock currently sells around 12-13.

Analysts speculate that should the institutions and big investors again become enthralled with medically and science oriented stocks in a rising market, Bentley Laboratories could become a big winner in capital gains. However, they would not recommend the issue for Aunt Martha or Cousin Constance.

National Medical Enterprises, also mentioned here previously, is another equity in health care which some SEC-registered analysts say has a lot of capital gains potential. But again, they caution that it has to be classified as a stock with considerable risk.

National Medical is in the business of hospital ownership and extended care facilities (where patients need some of the care offered by hospitals for long periods of recovery).

The firm's record of growth in earnings has been exceptional during recent years, although your correspondent has not seen the most recent quarterly report.

National Medical appeals to some SEC-registered analysts because the company thus far is a testimonial to the free enterprise or profit motivated operation of hospitals and extended care facilities.

These analysts claim that National Medical-owned institutions obtain and-or demand and get far superior management than their benevolently operated counterparts, owned and operated by municipalities or church organizations -- and in the process provide superior and less expensive care for the patients.

The stock, listed on the American Exchange, has come up to about 6½ or so in the good markets of recent days from a low last year of about 4. However, the stock has a long way to go to reach its high of 12 last year, or its 1973 high of 22.

Washington report

New priorities needed on budget

By SEN. STUART SYMINGTON

WASHINGTON, D.C.--All possible doubts about the seriousness of the nation's economic problems were removed by the Administration budget for Fiscal Year 1976, submitted to the Congress last week.

The budget of $349.9 billion projects a deficit of $51.9 billion--a record for peacetime and second in size only to the $54.8 billion deficit of 1943.

Despite the size of his budget and the projected deficit, the President told Congress he expects an unemployment rate of 8.1 per cent throughout 1975, and 7.9 per cent in 1976. That estimate translates into at least six million Americans out of work for each of the next two years.

In the Administration budget, defense and foreign aid account for more than one-quarter of the increases. A $104.76 billion military budget has been requested, $15 billion over this year's military authorization.

Included in the foreign aid budget is $1.29 billion in military assistance for South Vietnam. Other foreign aid would be increased by $880 million. These expenditures provide little stimulus for new jobs or increased government revenues. It is one of the major reasons I believe our priorities must now be changed.

With serious problems of huge deficits, recession, inflation and energy shortages, federal investments should be redirected toward helping our own less fortunate citizens; also in stimulating those sectors of the economy which will increase employment.

As but one example, an expanded government mortgage credit program would provide jobs in the construction industry--where unemployment is 15 per cent--and at the same time help meet growing demands for housing.

The President now requests a $100 million reduction in spending during fiscal 1976 for the public service jobs program, plus termination of this program Dec. 31, midway through the fiscal year.

Such a decrease represents false economy in this year of recession. Public service jobs for the unemployed can provide needed services and at the same time stimulate our economy and provide revenues through income taxes. They also will lower unemployment compensation payments.

Another example of wrong priorities is that, after sending some $170 billion to Indochina over the past decade, in recent days the Congress has been asked to approve another $522 million for this fiscal year for military assistance to Cambodia and South Vietnam; and at the same time said Administration has announced an increase of $650 million in the price of food stamps.

Congress has recognized the dire need of millions of hungry Americans, and both House and Senate voted overwhelmingly against the increased food stamp prices. I believe the Congress also will vote against increased aid to Southeast Asia.

In the coming months, we will scrutinize carefully the fiscal 1976 budget with these thoughts in mind.

A one-day conference to help explain the National Flood Insurance Program will be held Feb. 25 at the Muehlebach Hotel in Kansas City.

This insurance program, enacted in 1968, is designed to make insurance available for families and businesses with buildings subject to flooding.

The deadline for reservations is Feb. 18. They may be made by writing or calling Marlene Nagel, Mid-America Regional Council, 20 W. Ninth St., Third Floor, Kansas City, Mo. 64105, telephone number 816-474-4240.

Bell flight log shows Vegas trip

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Examination of a log of Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., flights has led to the discovery of a trip to Las Vegas by members of the Kansas Corporation Commission.

The Kansas City Star, in a copyrighted story in its morning edition today, said the flight log was introduced Tuesday during the second day of hearings by the Missouri Public Service Commission in Jefferson City on a $52.5 million rate increase Bell is seeking.

The log was introduced by David Lander, attorney for the Utility Consumers Council of Missouri, Inc. It mentioned the use of a jet from Southwestern Bell headquarters in St. Louis to places such as Boca Raton, Fla.; Long Beach, Calif.; Brainerd, Minn., and Litchfield, Ariz.

In each case a high Bell executive was listed as a passenger at least one way, the Star said. In several cases "no passenger" was logged for the return flight.

The KCC trip was discovered after the log for Oct. 9, 10, 11 and 12 was examined. It showed the passenger was Stanley H. Clow, vice-presi dent and general manager for the utility's Kansas operations.

The three-day tour of telephone equipment plants provided for members of the KCC included a day stopover in Las Vegas, Clow said. He said the Las Vegas visit was sandwiched between inspection tours of two Western Electric Company plants in Phoenix and Denver.

Western Electric makes telephone equipment for Bell.

Bell's corporate jet was used Oct. 8 to ferry three company executives and the commissioners, Dale Saffels, Vernon Stroberg and Jules Vern Doty, to Phoenix, Clow said.

That evening another aircraft was leased to take the group from Phoenix to Las Vegas. Bell's jet picked up the group in Las Vegas Oct. 10 and went to Denver and later to Topeka, he said.

Saffels, commission chairman, said, "Any expense a public utility has of any kind usually comes from the ratepayer. In this case, it was charged to the Kansas ratepayer. It was money well spent."

Saffels said he felt it was the commissioners duty to examine the factories for the ratepayer.

Both Saffels and Clow said they do not gamble, and went to Las Vegas for a relaxing break in their schedules

New priorities needed on budget

By SEN. STUART SYMINGTON

WASHINGTON, D.C.--All possible doubts about the seriousness of the nation's economic problems were removed by the Administration budget for Fiscal Year 1976, submitted to the Congress last week.

The budget of $349.9 billion projects a deficit of $51.9 billion--a record for peacetime and second in size only to the $54.8 billion deficit of 1943.

Despite the size of his budget and the projected deficit, the President told Congress he expects an unemployment rate of 8.1 per cent throughout 1975, and 7.9 per cent in 1976. That estimate translates into at least six million Americans out of work for each of the next two years.

In the Administration budget, defense and foreign aid account for more than one-quarter of the increases. A $104.76 billion military budget has been requested, $15 billion over this year's military authorization.

Included in the foreign aid budget is $1.29 billion in military assistance for South Vietnam. Other foreign aid would be increased by $880 million. These expenditures provide little stimulus for new jobs or increased government revenues. It is one of the major reasons I believe our priorities must now be changed.

With serious problems of huge deficits, recession, inflation and energy shortages, federal investments should be redirected toward helping our own less fortunate citizens; also in stimulating those sectors of the economy which will increase employment.

As but one example, an expanded government mortgage credit program would provide jobs in the construction industry--where unemployment is 15 per cent--and at the same time help meet growing demands for housing.

The President now requests a $100 million reduction in spending during fiscal 1976 for the public service jobs program, plus termination of this program Dec. 31, midway through the fiscal year.

Such a decrease represents false economy in this year of recession. Public service jobs for the unemployed can provide needed services and at the same time stimulate our economy and provide revenues through income taxes. They also will lower unemployment compensation payments.

Another example of wrong priorities is that, after sending some $170 billion to Indochina over the past decade, in recent days the Congress has been asked to approve another $522 million for this fiscal year for military assistance to Cambodia and South Vietnam; and at the same time said Administration has announced an increase of $650 million in the price of food stamps.

Congress has recognized the dire need of millions of hungry Americans, and both House and Senate voted overwhelmingly against the increased food stamp prices. I believe the Congress also will vote against increased aid to Southeast Asia.

In the coming months, we will scrutinize carefully the fiscal 1976 budget with these thoughts in mind.

Bell flight log shows Vegas trip

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Examination of a log of Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., flights has led to the discovery of a trip to Las Vegas by members of the Kansas Corporation Commission.

The Kansas City Star, in a copyrighted story in its morning edition today, said the flight log was introduced Tuesday during the second day of hearings by the Missouri Public Service Commission in Jefferson City on a $52.5 million rate increase Bell is seeking.

The log was introduced by David Lander, attorney for the Utility Consumers Council of Missouri, Inc. It mentioned the use of a jet from Southwestern Bell headquarters in St. Louis to places such as Boca Raton, Fla.; Long Beach, Calif.; Brainerd, Minn., and Litchfield, Ariz.

In each case a high Bell executive was listed as a passenger at least one way, the Star said. In several cases "no passenger" was logged for the return flight.

The KCC trip was discovered after the log for Oct. 9, 10, 11 and 12 was examined. It showed the passenger was Stanley H. Clow, vice-presi dent and general manager for the utility's Kansas operations.

The three-day tour of telephone equipment plants provided for members of the KCC included a day stopover in Las Vegas, Clow said. He said the Las Vegas visit was sandwiched between inspection tours of two Western Electric Company plants in Phoenix and Denver.

Western Electric makes telephone equipment for Bell.

Bell's corporate jet was used Oct. 8 to ferry three company executives and the commissioners. Dale Saffels, Vernon Stroberg and Jules Vern Doty, to Phoenix, Clow said.

That evening another aircraft was leased to take the group from Phoenix to Las Vegas. Bell's jet picked up the group in Las Vegas Oct. 10 and went to Denver and later to Topeka, he said.

Saffels, commission chairman, said, "Any expense a public utility has of any kind usually comes from the ratepayer. In this case, it was charged to the Kansas ratepayer. It was money well spent."

Saffels said he felt it was the commissioners duty to examine the factories for the ratepayer.

Both Saffels and Clow said they do not gamble, and went to Las Vegas for a relaxing break in their schedules

Why we don't need federal aid for medical care

One of the principal reasons why this would be unfortunate is that it would raise the cost of medical care without perhaps making any improvement. It might even cause the opposite, poorer quality, in the long run. Wouldn't care for the old be just a first step into government control of medical care for all age groups? Isn't it always true that costs tend to rise when someone else foots the bill? You may question whether hospital costs would be at their present high level and promise to go higher if it had not been for Blue Cross. The patient doesn't pay directly, so what difference does it make? So many people seem to feel this way today.

Would a few doctors be charging as much as they do if Blue Shield were not in existence? When you have automobile damage and an insurance company is footing the bill, would the cost of auto body work be as high as it is if you had had to pay out of your own pocket? You might also question, in an injury where an employer is involved, if the worker would go for so many office visits if he had to pay with his own money or expect a little extra time during working hours to do so, if it wasn't "on the boss."

When we are sick all of us want expert medical attention to get over our trouble as quickly as possible. By and large, this has been supplied with the vast majority of the medical profession being both able and conscientious. Few of us do not realize the great advances in medicine. This does not mean there are a few apparently taking advantage of any situation. Others may come to feel why be so all fired ethical when it is perfectly legal to do otherwise? This means that unless we are careful we can have a deterioration in, let us say, moral standards, and others believe it's the accepted practice. Isn't this what is likely to happen with the taxpayers paying the costs?

Originally unemployment insurance was to pay those who could not find work. You may wonder today if it is not being used to pay people for not working. Doctors, hospitals, druggists, nurses, might in the meantime try to get their costs and charges down. Even why not doctors and others have a printed price list? They would resent paying more for their autos, clothes, or liquor than the rest of us just because they are at present affluent.

Now, also do not those who are trying to put over Medical "ADE" understate the costs by a very considerable degree just to get it started? Who actually believes it will be paid for with the small amount proposed to be added to Social Security? But get it going and then what difference does it make? You can always add some more. Many people can remember when Social Society began, and the cost will soon be 10 percent of payrolls. Many are under the impression that this is not enough to pay what is at present obligated. The Railroad Retirement Act and Miners' Welfare with a much higher cost, you hear, are having problems. Those of us with lots of birthdays can now draw many times what we put in because others who are not taking out are filling the pot. It is like the chain letters that have circulated in the past.

You were asked to send some money to the name at head of the list, make ten copies, etc., to send your acquaintances, adding your name at the bottom. You were promised a lot of money when your name reached the top. Sounds good, doesn't it? But how many times do the names at the bottom ever reach the top? Do you honestly believe that my grandchildren or yours will ever draw a nickel from Social Security?

There is another aspect outside of giving the government more and more control over the individual. This fact is seldom mentioned and you may say is just so much mallarky. If these costs become unbearable, how long will it be before euthanasia is legalized? This same government then assumes the same power regarding the old folks that the Humane Society does now over stray dogs. If people continue to live longer, there will soon be more years spent in retirement than in working. Simple arithmetic will show this means about half the workers' earnings will be taken to support the "old folks." Then add other government costs-education, etc. Euthanasia could look mighty good to these workers. We might even have the makers of cyanide listed one day as a growth industry. You needn't consider Hitler, Russian massacre of Polish officers, Ghengis Khan, etc., but you can't sweep these facts under the rug either.

We have, as many realize, come to look on starting of life as something that is perhaps up to the individual. A case is now being made whether or not unmarried women should be furnished knowledge and means to prevent them from having children and this by a government agency. Now, this is not mentioned to bring up any religious or moral question, but simply to how that this is now a "fact," It is not only considered permissible but desirable and is "the law." A woman was acquitted across the water of putting her malformed child to sleep permanently, and abortion is legal in several countries now. Also whatwould be the effect on so -called teenagers? Will they be included in such a program? Or what age and qualification will be set? You might say that although this may be getting a little off the subject, with the way some suggestions are being made on illegitimacy, are some folks becoming "brawd" minded?

Some years from now, should we have food shortage, famine, etc., or other essentials short, we may not be able to get from others a return of our generosity. We have already accepted the principle that it is O.K. to stop life from starting and in case of malformed children to stop it. How much of a step will it be for the government to say that under the circumstances we can't at present afford to tolerate the old folks? The growing youth, workers, etc., need the available food, medicine, shelter, or what have you. So as the end seems to justify the means, sending the old folks across the River Stix ahead of times is perfectly justifiable. Rulings by a government board or commission, even department heads plus exucitive orders, even now have the force of law. Congress does not have to act. Will you someday have to answer a child's innocent question such as "what happened to Grandpa?" with " Last night some men from Health and Welfare came and took poor Grandpa away and said he would have to sleep forever. So in place of getting the government into more and more things, would it not be better to get it out of many it is now in?

You know suggestion is now being made that Adenauer, DeGaulle, Franco, Salazar, Chaing, be retired and replaced by younger and presumably more pliable men. Silence on Nehru. There have so far been no proposals to retire the present Pope, but that can come with the suggestion he also be replaced by a younger man. With present phobias may come the suggestion that this new Pope should also be from one of the undeveloped nations. You no doubt know that some of our present officials are, let us say, "unpredictable," so why put more temptation before them with additional welfare programs?

You may say that most people will not save if we cut taxes and let them have their own money. So what? I have an employee who can't go thru a week without borrowing money about Wednesday and he is paid every Friday. So in place of taking this out of his pay, we have him pay off the next working day, put it to one side and come Wednesday lend him this money. But why penalize other workers who can handle their money a little better?

We are always going to need some charity. Even you and I might need assistance from others had we had some misfortune early in life. All of us have problems; do you know of anyone who has not had misfortune, sickness, and death to face? But how is it going to help people to have the government spend more and more of their money until we finally all go down in one great smash because we have been bled white and no longer have enough vitality or incentive to continue? So if a fraction of the energy and thought were put into trying to get both our national and local governments down to size that is spent trying to expand them, letting people spend their money themselves, wouldn't the vast majority of us be better off mentally and physically, as wellas financially? The same line of reasoning also applies to other government "ADE" programs such as that to education, and who says the trend cannot be reversed if most of us make the effort? Actually, the slight expenditure of time should be more rewarding than any other way you can spend it.

RE: Ron Jaynes

Dear Mr. Blanton:

I understand that someone has reported that Ron Jaynes has been paid by this office to run newspaper stories on the Dr. Norman Asa Garrison, Jr. case. Any such reports are vicious and malicious falsehoods. Ron has provided this office with pictures and interviews with witnesses and we have paid him only for such services. In fact, he was given information which was not given to other newspapers. This was because we felt he was reporting the case truthfully. I think Mr. Jaynes has done a wonderful piece of fair reporting in this case and I think the decision of the Mississippi Circuit Court bore out the fact that Dr. Garrison was innocent.

I certyainly hope that Mr. Jaynes will not be penalized because he saw fit to report a case as it really was.

With kindest thanks for taking the time to read this letter and with kindest wishes, I remain.

Sincerely
JOHN B. FARESE

A place women go to get badder

By Tom Tiede

RALEIGH, N.C. — (NEA) — Joanne Little does not deny killing Clarence Alligood, but she insists it was for a good and justifiable reason. An inmate of the Beaufort County jail at the time, 20-year-old Miss Little says that Alligood, 62, a night guard, approached her with an ice pick, threatened and then raped her. During the struggle the woman gained possession of the ice pick and stabbed the man to death.

"Self defense."

The courts will have to rule on the ultimate accuracy of Joanne Little's testimony — she is currently charged with murder — but whatever the outcome, the case has served to illustrate a matter which goes far beyond the Beaufort County lockup: What is the status of women in American jails today? Feminists and civil libertarians across the land say it is deplorable and are demanding investigatory clean ups.

Investigations would be timely. Where women once comprised an insignificant percentage of the total prison population, not the least because judges were reluctant to incarcerate mothers, today they stuff jails with multiplying and alarming numbers. FBI statistics show that female arrests between 1960 and 1973 increased by 95 per cent (as compared to 27 per cent for males), and law officers expect the trend to continue. Liberated women, as anthropologist Ashley Montagu says, "have the aspiration and gumption to outdo men in crime."

In many if not most cases, the nation's detention facilities have been unprepared for the gals. Not the most promising places even for men, most small town jails have no separate conveniences and some operate on the premise, as a Federal Bureau of Prisons employe says, "that when a guy needs to relieve himself he can choose his corner." Besides this, of course, and here is the main point in the Joanne Little defense, the supervisory staffs in U.S. jails are almost always male.

Even under the best of circumstances, say penal authorities, men should not supervise women in a jail environment. Geri Kenyan, a National Organization of Women member currently probing detention facilities for women, reasons that "since many women wind up in jail because they do not have a solid appreciation for themselves as women, they can hardly be rehabilitated in a place where men continue to dominate."

What's more, many charge, the male-dominated female is ripe for the kind of abuse claimed by Joanne Little. Says Gerald Paul, an attorney for the latter: "I've been involved in a lot of these cases. Usually, it's not a case of all out rape, but it's a regular thing in many jails for male guards to offer favors or privileges in return for sex."

In most instances, says NOW's Geri Kenyan, women trapped in this kind of degradation are reluctant to expose it publicly. Many of them, after all, are in jail for sex-related offenses (about 70 per cent of jailed juvenile females are in this category) and thus feel their stories would lack credibility. Then, too, there is the difficulty of proof. Says Attorney Paul: "I've seen times where a woman would charge a jailer with abuse and then be confronted in court with a phoney confession of her own guilt in the matter. What happens is that a sheriff will take the stand, say the woman enticed the jailer, produce an unsigned 'confession' — and usually, the judge takes his word over hers."

There have been, no doubt, times when female cons have enticed their male keepers. The street in this kind of controversy has to run both ways and since it does, it would seem prudent to check for ruts.

Geri Kenyan believes one solution is to stop jailing women for crimes that discriminate — are prostitutes, as example, any worse than their customers who go free? Short of this radical and wholly correct progressiveness, however, the thinking here is that women should at least not be jailed in circumstances that may be victimizing. (Neither should men either, but that's another and very old story.) To be sure, prisons must be the places where the bad people go —

But they must not remain places, my grammatical apologies, where people go to get badder.

Why we don't need federal aid for medical care

One of the principal reasons why this would be unfortunate is that it would raise the cost of medical care without perhaps making any improvement. It might even cause the opposite, poorer quality, in the long run. Wouldn't care for the old be just a first step into government control of medical care for all age groups? Isn't it always true that costs tend to rise when someone else foots the bill? You may question whether hospital costs would be at their present high level and promise to go higher if it had not been for Blue Cross. The patient doesn't pay directly, so what difference does it make? So many people seem to feel this way today.

Would a few doctors be charging as much as they do if Blue Shield were not in existence? When you have automobile damage and an insurance company is footing the bill, would the cost of auto body work be as high as it is if you had had to pay out of your own pocket? You might also question, in an injury where an employer is involved, if the worker would go for so many office visits if he had to pay with his own money or expect a little extra time during working hours to do so, if it wasn't "on the boss."

When we are sick all of us want expert medical attention to get over our trouble as quickly as possible. By and large, this has been supplied with the vast majority of the medical profession being both able and conscientious. Few of us do not realize the great advances in medicine. This does not mean there are a few apparently taking advantage of any situation. Others may come to feel why be so all fired ethical when it is perfectly legal to do otherwise? This means that unless we are careful we can have a deterioration in, let us say, moral standards, and others believe it's the accepted practice. Isn't this what is likely to happen with the taxpayers paying the costs?

Originally unemployment insurance was to pay those who could not find work. You may wonder today if it is not being used to pay people for not working. Doctors, hospitals, druggists, nurses, might in the meantime try to get their costs and charges down. Even why not doctors and others have a printed price list? They would resent paying more for their autos, clothes, or liquor than the rest of us just because they are at present affluent.

Now, also do not those who are trying to put over Medical "ADE" understate the costs by a very considerable degree just to get it started? Who actually believes it will be paid for with the small amount proposed to be added to Social Security? But get it going and then what difference does it make? You can always add some more. Many people can remember when Social Society began, and the cost will soon be 10 percent of payrolls. Many are under the impression that this is not enough to pay what is at present obligated. The Railroad Retirement Act and Miners' Welfare with a much higher cost, you hear, are having problems. Those of us with lots of birthdays can now draw many times what we put in because others who are not taking out are filling the pot. It is like the chain letters that have circulated in the past.

You were asked to send some money to the name at head of the list, make ten copies, etc., to send your acquaintances, adding your name at the bottom. You were promised a lot of money when your name reached the top. Sounds good, doesn't it? But how many times do the names at the bottom ever reach the top? Do you honestly believe that my grandchildren or yours will ever draw a nickel from Social Security?

There is another aspect outside of giving the government more and more control over the individual. This fact is seldom mentioned and you may say is just so much mallarky. If these costs become unbearable, how long will it be before euthanasia is legalized? This same government then assumes the same power regarding the old folks that the Humane Society does now over stray dogs. If people continue to live longer, there will soon be more years spent in retirement than in working. Simple arithmetic will show this means about half the workers' earnings will be taken to support the "old folks." Then add other government costs-education, etc. Euthanasia could look mighty good to these workers. We might even have the makers of cyanide listed one day as a growth industry. You needn't consider Hitler, Russian massacre of Polish officers, Ghengis Khan, etc., but you can't sweep these facts under the rug either.

We have, as many realize, come to look on starting of life as something that is perhaps up to the individual. A case is now being made whether or not unmarried women should be furnished knowledge and means to prevent them from having children and this by a government agency. Now, this is not mentioned to bring up any religious or moral question, but simply to how that this is now a "fact," It is not only considered permissible but desirable and is "the law." A woman was acquitted across the water of putting her malformed child to sleep permanently, and abortion is legal in several countries now. Also whatwould be the effect on so -called teen-agers? Will they be included in such a program? Or what age and qualification will be set? You might say that although this may be getting a little off the subject, with the way some suggestions are being made on illegitimacy, are some folks becoming "brawd" minded?

Some years from now, should we have food shortage, famine, etc., or other essentials short, we may not be able to get from others a return of our generosity. We have already accepted the principle that it is O.K. to stop life from starting and in case of malformed children to stop it. How much of a step will it be for the government to say that under the circumstances we can't at present afford to tolerate the old folks? The growing youth, workers, etc., need the available food, medicine, shelter, or what have you. So as the end seems to justify the means, sending the old folks across the River Stix ahead of times is perfectly justifiable. Rulings by a government board or commission, even department heads plus exucitive orders, even now have the force of law. Congress does not have to act. Will you someday have to answer a child's innocent question such as "what happened to Grandpa?" with " Last night some men from Health and Welfare came and took poor Grandpa away and said he would have to sleep forever. So in place of getting the government into more and more things, would it not be better to get it out of many it is now in?

You know suggestion is now being made that Adenauer, DeGaulle, Franco, Salazar, Chaing, be retired and replaced by younger and presumably more pliable men. Silence on Nehru. There have so far been no proposals to retire the present Pope, but that can come with the suggestion he also be replaced by a younger man. With present phobias may come the suggestion that this new Pope should also be from one of the undeveloped nations. You no doubt know that some of our present officials are, let us say, "unpredictable," so why put more temptation before them with additional welfare programs?

You may say that most people will not save if we cut taxes and let them have their own money. So what? I have an employee who can't go thru a week without borrowing money about Wednesday and he is paid every Friday. So in place of taking this out of his pay, we have him pay off the next working day, put it to one side and come Wednesday lend him this money. But why penalize other workers who can handle their money a little better?

We are always going to need some charity. Even you and I might need assistance from others had we had some misfortune early in life. All of us have problems; do you know of anyone who has not had misfortune, sickness, and death to face? But how is it going to help people to have the government spend more and more of their money until we finally all go down in one great smash because we have been bled white and no longer have enough vitality or incentive to continue? So if a fraction of the energy and thought were put into trying to get both our national and local governments down to size that is spent trying to expand them, letting people spend their money themselves, wouldn't the vast majority of us be better off mentally and physically, as wellas financially? The same line of reasoning also applies to other government "ADE" programs such as that to education, and who says the trend cannot be reversed if most of us make the effort? Actually, the slight expenditure of time should be more rewarding than any other way you can spend it.

RE: Ron Jaynes

Dear Mr. Blanton:

I understand that someone has reported that Ron Jaynes has been paid by this office to run newspaper stories on the Dr. Norman Asa Garrison, Jr. case. Any such reports are vicious and malicious falsehoods. Ron has provided this office with pictures and interviews with witnesses and we have paid him only for such services. In fact, he was given information which was not given to other newspapers. This was because we felt he was reporting the case truthfully. I think Mr. Jaynes has done a wonderful piece of fair reporting in this case and I think the decision of the Mississippi Circuit Court bore out the fact that Dr. Garrison was innocent.

I certyainly hope that Mr. Jaynes will not be penalized because he saw fit to report a case as it really was.

With kindest thanks for taking the time to read this letter and with kindest wishes, I remain.

Sincerely
JOHN B. FARESE

A place women go to get badder

By Tom Tiede

RALEIGH, N.C. — (NEA) — Joanne Little does not deny killing Clarence Alligood, but she insists it was for a good and justifiable reason. An inmate of the Beaufort County jail at the time, 20-year-old Miss Little says that Alligood, 62, a night guard, approached her with an ice pick, threatened and then raped her. During the struggle the woman gained possession of the ice pick and stabbed the man to death.

"Self defense."

The courts will have to rule on the ultimate accuracy of Joanne Little's testimony — she is currently charged with murder — but whatever the outcome, the case has served to illustrate a matter which goes far beyond the Beaufort County lockup: What is the status of women in American jails today? Feminists and civil libertarians across the land say it is deplorable and are demanding investigatory clean ups.

Investigations would be timely. Where women once comprised an insignificant percentage of the total prison population, not the least because judges were reluctant to incarcerate mothers, today they stuff jails with multiplying and alarming numbers. FBI statistics show that female arrests between 1960 and 1973 increased by 95 per cent (as compared to 27 per cent for males), and law officers expect the trend to continue. Liberated women, as anthropologist Ashley Montagu says, "have the aspiration and gumption to outdo men in crime."

In many if not most cases, the nation's detention facilities have been unprepared for the gals. Not the most promising places even for men, most small town jails have no separate conveniences and some operate on the premise, as a Federal Bureau of Prisons employe says, "that when a guy needs to relieve himself he can choose his corner." Besides this, of course, and here is the main point in the Joanne Little defense, the supervisory staffs in U.S. jails are almost always male.

Even under the best of circumstances, say penal authorities, men should not supervise women in a jail environment. Geri Kenyan, a National Organization of Women member currently probing detention facilities for women, reasons that "since many women wind up in jail because they do not have a solid appreciation for themselves as women, they can hardly be rehabilitated in a place where men continue to dominate."

What's more, many charge, the male-dominated female is ripe for the kind of abuse claimed by Joanne Little. Says Gerald Paul, an attorney for the latter: "I've been involved in a lot of these cases. Usually, it's not a case of all out rape, but it's a regular thing in many jails for male guards to offer favors or privileges in return for sex."

In most instances, says NOW's Geri Kenyan, women trapped in this kind of degradation are reluctant to expose it publicly. Many of them, after all, are in jail for sex-related offenses (about 70 per cent of jailed juvenile females are in this category) and thus feel their stories would lack credibility. Then, too, there is the difficulty of proof. Says Attorney Paul: "I've seen times where a woman would charge a jailer with abuse and then be confronted in court with a phoney confession of her own guilt in the matter. What happens is that a sheriff will take the stand, say the woman enticed the jailer, produce an unsigned 'confession' — and usually, the judge takes his word over hers."

There have been, no doubt, times when female cons have enticed their male keepers. The street in this kind of controversy has to run both ways and since it does, it would seem prudent to check for ruts.

Geri Kenyan believes one solution is to stop jailing women for crimes that discriminate — are prostitutes, as example, any worse than their customers who go free? Short of this radical and wholly correct progressiveness, however, the thinking here is that women should at least not be jailed in circumstances that may be victimizing. (Neither should men either, but that's another and very old story.) To be sure, prisons must be the places where the bad people go —

But they must not remain places, my grammatical apologies, where people go to get badder.

Hearnes files for senator

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo.(AP) — Former Gov. Warren E. Hearnes complained again about the treatment from the U.S. attorney's office in Kansas City Wednesday during his official filing for the Democratic nomination for U.S. Senate in 1976.

Hearnes criticized the treatment of many witnesses by U.S. Attorney Bert Hurn's staff. The U. S. Attorney's office and a federal grand jury has been investigating for three years finances in the Hearnes administration.

Hearnes spoke to newsmen as he paid the $100 filing fee in the secretary of state's office in the Capitol.

Hearnes became the third candidate to file for the post, following Joseph Teasdale and Michael Kennedy, both of Kansas City. Incumbent Democrat Stuart Symington has indicated he will seek a fifth term.

Republican Atty. Gen. John Danforth, who lost to Symington in 1970, has said he will either run for the Senate or drop out of politics.

If elected, Hearnes said he would be a strong advocate of rights for witnesses during grand jury probes.

Hearnes said he would have "nothing to worry about" in the investigation as long as the grand jury was "fair-minded."

The early months of his campaign will be spent setting up organizations in all the counties and the city of St. Louis, Hearnes said. He said he would have to be careful not to "peak" his campaign too early before the August 1976 primary.

To violate this law, even by mistake, could result in forfeiture of office, a fine of up to $5,000 and one year in jail, even if such a stiff penalty is unlikely for an oversight.

Ballard pointed out that a store owner might, instead of each customer,just list his business, as it is done on the tax forms. A person like a lawyer or doctor, however, cannot get by this easily.

A section of the law requires that the payers of over $100 in the prior year to the candidate or for his services be listed by name and address. Doctors and lawyers are ethically forbidden to reveal their clients without permission. Thus, Ballard said, the candidates who are doctors or laywers cannot run for office or will risk breaking the law.

Still another problem with the law, Ballard said, is that if an apparent violation is reported, the local authorities are to investigate. The law says that if no action is taken after 15 years, the Missouri Board of Election Commissioners shall prosecute the violation. This applies, says Ballard, whether the local authorities decide there is a case worth prosecuting or not.

Despite the shortcomings of the law, however, it will hopefully make things better. "Perfection is hard to attain," Ballard said, "and we just have to figure out how to live with it until the kinks get worked out."

Fred French of Sikeston who recently resigned as district Scout executive, was named co-chairman of the Scout-O-Rama committee with Mike Kilgore of Sikeston. They scheduled a meeting for Feb. 18 at 7 p.m. at Kilgore's office to plan the event, which will be held March 22.

John Peel of Sikeston, district camping chairman, announced that the Spring Camporee will be held May 2-4. handicapped children in a special bus outfitted with a lift.

Problems facing the school system, Harbin said, include, how to handle the child with bladder problems and how to handle medical problems, therapy and paralyzed children.

No location has been decided yet for the classroom. Harbin said there are six to eight handicapped children who would participate in the program.

Personnel Change

Roger Sherman, will become fulltime Director of Secondary Education, on July 1, Harbin said.

Sherman is currently both director of secondary Education and principal of the Senior High School.

Assistant Principal Robert Buchannan will become principal.

Steve Borgsmiller, a social studies teacher, will spend two hours a day in administration and the rest of the day teaching Harbin said.

Harbin said the state had urged the school system to have two fulltime assistant superintendents, and Sherman's appointment will satisfy the request. The system already has a fulltime director of elementary education.

The school system will receive an extra $274,000 in state aid under a proposed revision in the educational funding law, providing the legislature funds the change.

The R-6 district now received $2,062,196 in apportionments from the state. The revision would raise the apportionments to $2,377,700. The district is losing $41,278 in intangible taxes next year. The intangible tax has been abolished.

Sickel Cell Anemia

The Missouri Division of Health has asked to test the districts children for Sickel Cell Anemia.The disease is found in all races, although primarily in Negroes.

The test would require a blood sample from students who volunteer to take the test. The Division of Health also set up an educational program on the disease.

Harbin said the district has asked the Scott County Medical Association to approve the program, before the district gives the go ahead.

Records Problems

Parents of a few students have not turned over to the school system their children's birth certificates and immunization records, despite repeated requests from the schools.

Harbin asked to board for guidance in the matter since state law says if the parents have not given the schools the records within 30 days, the system should turn the matter over to the division of health for prosecution.

Filing Deadline

The board set 5 p.m. March 14 as the filing deadline for candidates to the board in the April 1 election. No candidates have yet filed for the two terms in this year's election.

Other Items

School attendance for January was 91.4 per cent, down somewhat from normal attendance. Harbin said the decrease was due to a virus.

Eight-six per cent of the parents attended parent-teacher conferences. There was 1,898 conferences held out of a possible 2,211.

Approximately 44 million persons live near highways or airports.

Chaffee sets installation

CHAFFEE — The Chaffee Chamber of Commerce will install new officers at 6 p.m. Feb. 20 in the American Legion Hall.

Bill Wellborn, executive director of the Sikeston Area Chamber of Commerce, will be the guest speaker.

AN EXPRESSION OF DEVOTION

Every funeral director realizes that in the funeral service members of the bereaved family are not only expressing their devotion to a departed member, but also letting the world know that someone worthy of a pause in their activities has passed on. That is why we have designed our funeral home in a manner to give meaning to this consideration and why, as unobtrusively as possible, we endeavor to give sympathetic understanding to their commitment.

Hearnes files for senator

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo.(AP) — Former Gov. Warren E. Hearnes complained again about the treatment from the U.S. attorney's office in Kansas City Wednesday during his official filing for the Democratic nomination for U.S. Senate in 1976.

Hearnes criticized the treatment of many witnesses by U.S. Attorney Bert Hurn's staff. The U. S. Attorney's office and a federal grand jury has been investigating for three years finances in the Hearnes administration.

Hearnes spoke to newsmen as he paid the $100 filing fee in the secretary of state's office in the Capitol.

Hearnes became the third candidate to file for the post, following Joseph Teasdale and Michael Kennedy, both of Kansas City. Incumbent Democrat Stuart Symington has indicated he will seek a fifth term.

Republican Atty. Gen. John Danforth, who lost to Symington in 1970, has said he will either run for the Senate or drop out of politics.

If elected, Hearnes said he would be a strong advocate of rights for witnesses during grand jury probes.

Hearnes said he would have "nothing to worry about" in the investigation as long as the grand jury was "fair-minded."

The early months of his campaign will be spent setting up organizations in all the counties and the city of St. Louis, Hearnes said. He said he would have to be careful not to "peak" his campaign too early before the August 1976 primary.

Burchfield provides spark

Coach Buddy's Spears SHS Bulldogs got back on the winning track Tuesday night, but not before some anxious moments late in the game.

Sikeston posted a 70-59 SEMO conference decision ove the Perryville Pirates and ran their season record to 8-11 behidn the performance of Hal Presley and some late game heroics by Steve Burchfield and Mark Eaves.

Presley connected on nine of 17 shots from the field and three of seven free throws for 21 points.The steadily improving frontliner hauled in 18 rebounds, his best mark ever, in leading the Dogs to a 40-36 edge in that department also.

Sikeston opened up a 20 point lead early in the second half, before a Perryville zone press narrowed the margin to five points early in the fourth quarter.

Steals by Burchfield and Eaves pulled the Dogs out of it late in the game. The 5-foot-7 Burchfield canned four free throws and accounted for six points during the final minutes of the game to preserve the victory.

The Bulldogs shot a blistering 46.8 per cent from the field, but continued to struggle at the charity line where it made only 60 per cent.

Eaves and Burchfield rounded out the Dogs double figure scoring with 12 and 10 points respectively while five others shared in the overall team total.

Darrell Niswonger paced Perryville's offense with 20 points. The Pirates record dipped to 8-10 overall while the Dogs league mark jumped to 2-3.

Sikeston's junior varsity relied on balance to win its sixth straight, 67-41. A total of 13 players got into the scoring act for SHS, who was led by the 10 markers of Lawrence Jacksn Jackson.

The Bulldogs face a tough assignment Friday night when they battle Poplar Bluff.

Panthers favored

By BILL 'COACH' HARRISON

There is only one more week of regular scheduled games for 3A and 2A class teams as the regionals begin on February 24 and I can't say that I'm sorry that it's here. It's been a long season for the old night crew at The Daily Standard and a few of us are beginning to wear down a little.

I'll try one more time to get that perfect night after so many near misses. We'll start with the really big game at Lilbourn Saturday night.

Kelly at Lilbourn Saturday --- The name of the game is "beat Lilbourn". The Kelly Hawks would like nothing better as the Panthers might have kept them from being the state 2A champion last year. I got into all kinds of trouble last year for picking Kelly to beat the Panthers in the regular scheduled game so I'm going to avoid all the embarrassment this year by going with the favorite Panthers. Lilbourn plays with their opponents like a cat with a mouse. The Panthers have played with their opponents this season until they got tired and then scored enough points to quit. If the Panthers feel like playing more than four quarters they will but if they just want to play the regulation time they score enough to win. No matter how many points Kelly scores Lilbourn will score more --- 75-70. Tom Brock thinks it'll be a lot worse — say 20 points.

FRIDAY

Delta at Oak Ridge --- the Jays haven't a chance --- 85-70.

Oran at Parma --- The Eagles have a good shooting team and should score more than the Pirates --- 80-70.

Zalma at Puxico --- I think Puxico will win this one --- 75-70.

College High at Notre Dame --- The Bulldogs are too much for the Preps --- 85-60.

Neelyville at Ellsinore --- The Tigers control the hill country --- 80-60.

Bloomfield at Matthews --- I think the Wildcats should win this one. Matthews won the other one at Bloomfield --- 75-70.

Cape Central at Dexter --- The Bearcats are almost unbeatable at home. Central is good but I like Dexter in this one --- 65-60.

Kelly at Chaffee ---The Hawks will be looking ahead to Lilbourn but should have little trouble with the Red Devils ---80-70.

Sikeston at Poplar Bluff --- I have to pick the Mules because of home court --- 65-60.

Charleston at Kennett --- If this game were played close to Sikeston it would draw a capacity crowd but it's too far away. The Bluejays are playing super ball under first year coach Mitch Haskins.Charleston blew a big lead in the finals at Poplar Bluff earlier but still won and I think the Bluejays can win again ---75-70.

Twin Rivers at Bernie --- I hear the Royals are tough so I pick them to beat the Mules --- 80-60.

Woodland at Advance --- The Hornets are my favorite --- 85-60.

Scott Central at Bell City --- TheCubs are n ot in the same class with the Braves --- 90-60.

Steve Burchfield (10) launches a shot against the Perryville Pirates during SEMO conference league play at the field house Tuesday night. The late game clutch play of this 5-foot-7 Bulldog helped the Dogs preserve a 70-59 win.

Burchfield provides spark

Coach Buddy's Spears SHS Bulldogs got back on the winning track Tuesday night, but not before some anxious moments late in the game.

Sikeston posted a 70-59 SEMO conference decision ove the Perryville Pirates and ran their season record to 8-11 behidn the performance of Hal Presley and some late game heroics by Steve Burchfield and Mark Eaves.

Presley connected on nine of 17 shots from the field and three of seven free throws for 21 points.The steadily improving frontliner hauled in 18 rebounds, his best mark ever, in leading the Dogs to a 40-36 edge in that department also.

Sikeston opened up a 20 point lead early in the second half, before a Perryville zone press narrowed the margin to five points early in the fourth quarter.

Steals by Burchfield and Eaves pulled the Dogs out of it late in the game. The 5-foot-7 Burchfield canned four free throws and accounted for six points during the final minutes of the game to preserve the victory.

The Bulldogs shot a blistering 46.8 per cent from the field, but continued to struggle at the charity line where it made only 60 per cent.

Eaves and Burchfield rounded out the Dogs double figure scoring with 12 and 10 points respectively while five others shared in the overall team total.

Darrell Niswonger paced Perryville's offense with 20 points. The Pirates record dipped to 8-10 overall while the Dogs league mark jumped to 2-3.

Sikeston's junior varsity relied on balance to win its sixth straight, 67-41. A total of 13 players got into the scoring act for SHS, who was led by the 10 markers of Lawrence Jacksn Jackson.

The Bulldogs face a tough assignment Friday night when they battle Poplar Bluff.

Robinson hits 33

SCOTT CITY — All-Stater Frankie Robinson took a liking to the Illmo-Scott City high school goals Tuesday night, pumping in 33 points in leading the district's top rated Lilbourn Panthers to a 100-62 victory. The 6-foot-1 sharp shooter played only three quarters.

Lilbourn gunned its way to a 30-21 first quarter lead and rolled up a 58-29 halftime advantage, using their pressure defense most effectively in the second period to hold the Rams to eight points.

Coach Bob Phelps' Panthers, while chalking up their 32nd straight win over the past two seasons and 21st this campaign, seemed to enjoy the hosts facilities and took advantage of the situation to get in their first work in a tuneup for the class 2A regional here later this month.

Balance was the key for LHS, who put 13 men in the scoring column.

The Panthers face their biggest test of the season Saturday night when they host Kelly. These same two teams met in the first round of the state tournament last season and LHS prevailed and waltzed through the event after their narrow two point win over the Hawks.

Lilbourn's junior varsity struggled, but claimed a narrow 45- 44 victory behind Ramon Willis' 12 point leadership.

Mules prevail

POPLAR BLUFF — The New Madrid Indians traveled here Tuesday and found a much improved Mule team.

Coach Carroll Compton's Tribe man handled the Mules earlier in the season, but it was a different story this time as PBHS used a good defensive third period, holding NMHS to seven points for a 69-58 win.

The Mules led 19-18 after the first period with their height inside taking advantage of the shorter Indians as Scott Harrell was unstoppable by NMHS. The Mules increased their lead in the second period to lead 36-31 at the half. In the third period the Mules' defense stopped the Indians with only seven points while Harrell and company were netting 17 to put the Indian away for good.

Scott Harrell scored 26 for the Mules and Harold Tuckker hit 21 for NMHS.

Poplar Bluff won the B game 66-36 as Dale Henton scored 15 for the winners and Randy Robinson scored 10 for NMHS.

BHS used a consistent attack to rack up the win as they kept a three to seven point spread throughout the ballgame.

Kevin Sides led the Mules with 17, while Gary Pyland got 20 for Gideon.

Robinson hits 33

SCOTT CITY — All-Stater Frankie Robinson took a liking to the Illmo-Scott City high school goals Tuesday night, pumping in 33 points in leading the district's top rated Lilbourn Panthers to a 100-62 victory. The 6-foot-1 sharp shooter played only three quarters.

Lilbourn gunned its way to a 30-21 first quarter lead and rolled up a 58-29 halftime advantage, using their pressure defense most effectively in the second period to hold the Rams to eight points.

Coach Bob Phelps' Panthers, while chalking up their 32nd straight win over the past two seasons and 21st this campaign, seemed to enjoy the hosts facilities and took advantage of the situation to get in their first work in a tuneup for the class 2A regional here later this month.

Balance was the key for LHS, who put 13 men in the scoring column.

The Panthers face their biggest test of the season Saturday night when they host Kelly. These same two teams met in the first round of the state tournament last season and LHS prevailed and waltzed through the event after their narrow two point win over the Hawks.

Lilbourn's junior varsity struggled, but claimed a narrow 45- 44 victory behind Ramon Willis' 12 point leadership.

Mules prevail

POPLAR BLUFF — The New Madrid Indians traveled here Tuesday and found a much improved Mule team.

Coach Carroll Compton's Tribe man handled the Mules earlier in the season, but it was a different story this time as PBHS used a good defensive third period, holding NMHS to seven points for a 69-58 win.

The Mules led 19-18 after the first period with their height inside taking advantage of the shorter Indians as Scott Harrell was unstoppable by NMHS. The Mules increased their lead in the second period to lead 36-31 at the half. In the third period the Mules' defense stopped the Indians with only seven points while Harrell and company were netting 17 to put the Indian away for good.

Scott Harrell scored 26 for the Mules and Harold Tuckker hit 21 for NMHS.

COOK-ING-UP

By WANDA ATCHLEY

Dessert has almost become a necessity in our American style of eating, given the typical desire for sweets. However, we have had to curb our intake recently due to the spiraling price of sugar and related products.

Cooks all over America received a pleasant surprise, however, when a major drop in sugar prices occurred. We can now return our attentions to the oven and our favorite dessert recipes.

The following recipes, prepared in your own kitchen, will draw raves from satisfied diners.

OATMEAL CAKE

One third cup boiling water
1 cup sugar
1 cup brown sugar
1 cup margarine
2 eggs
1 and a third cup all-purpose flour
1 tsp. soda
1 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. cinnamon
½ tsp. salt
1 tsp. vanilla

Add oatmeal to boiling water; let stand for 20 minutes. Cream sugars and margarine; add eggs, one at a time, beating after each addition. Add oatmeal. Sift dry ingredients together; add to creamed mixture, stirring just enough to blend. Add vanilla. Place in greased and floured 12 x 7 ½ x ¾-inch baking dish. Bake at 325 degrees for 35 minutes or until cake springs back when touched. Yield: 12 servings.

I am really perturbed about this equal rights bill thats being passed.

I never wanted to be on equal terms with any man, for frankly I always considered myself superior and I sure don't want to have to step down a notch.

I mean think of all the really good reasons one has for being a woman and they want to take all that away from us. Examples:

they open the car door for us –
they have to foot the bills when they ask us out —

They have to walk down the sidewalk next to the street so that its there clothes that get mud splattered instead of ours-

they have to kill dragons with swords and then rescue us out of their caves —

they have to provide a good solid shoulder for us to weep on —

they have to get down on their knees when they propose —

they have to pick us up when we faint and carry us to a couch —

they have to take the babysitter home at midnight —

they have to go off to war —

Now, they are about to make us equal and that means we open our own car doors, pay our own bills, get mud splattered, slay our own dragons and crawl out of the caves on our own bellies, weep alone, kneel and propose, lie where we faint, cart our own babysitter at midnight, and fight the wars male politicians start - but, I ask you — how can they pass a bill to make us equal in all things when no amount of congressional whoop-de-doo is ever going to be able to make a man pregnant!

By CHERIE BLANTON

I am really perturbed about this equal rights bill thats being passed.

I never wanted to be on equal terms with any man, for frankly I always considered myself superior and I sure don't want to have to step down a notch.

I mean think of all the really good reasons one has for being a woman and they want to take all that away from us. Examples:

they open the car door for us—
they have to foot the bills when they ask us out—

They have to walk down the sidewalk next to the street so that its there clothes that get mud splattered instead of ours-

they have to kill dragons with swords and then rescue us out of their caves—
they have to provide a good solid shoulder for us to weep on—
they have to get down on their knees when they propose—
they have to pick us up when we faint and carry us to a couch—
they have to take the babysitter home at midnight—
they have to go off to war—

Now, they are about to make us equal and that means we open our own car doors, pay our own bills, get mud splattered, slay our own dragons and crawl out of the caves on our own bellies, weep alone, kneel and propose, lie where we faint, cart our own babysitter at midnight, and fight the wars male politicians start - but, I ask you — how can they pass a bill to make us equal in all things when no amount of congressional whoop-de-doo is ever going to be able to make a man pregnant!

Blue law detracts police

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Top police officials from Kansas City and St. Louis told a Missouri House committee Tuesday night that police should be able to direct their attention to more important matters than enforcing the Sunday blue law.

In other legislative committee action, Secretary of State James Kirkpatrick spoke for a bill to revise the state's campaign finance law and University of Missouri President C. Brice Ratchford asked the Senate Appropriations Committee for $133 million in state funds to run MU next year.

In addition, the House Education committee recommended a new way to fund junior colleges and heard pleas for full four-year state funding of Missouri Western and Missouri Southern state colleges.

Kansas City Police Chief Joseph McNamara and St. Louis Police Board Chairman Theodore McNeal each told the House License and Related Matters Committee that enforcement of the blue law prohibiting the retail sale of certain items on Sunday detracts from police work on more serious crimes.

McNamara said the law "has led to a great deal of confusion and resentment against the police and the prosecutor's office."

Rep. Phillip Scaglia, D-Kansas City, sponsor of the bill to repeal the blue law, said a joint House and Senate interim committee on metropolitan problems had determined in a study that the "sentiment of the people is overwhelmingly to repeal the Sunday blue law."

Kansas City proponents of the bill said Kansas City would receive about $280,000 more annually in sales and related taxes if the law were repealed and that the current law is unclear on exactly what items are forbidden from sale on Sunday.

Opponents of the repeal measure are scheduled to speak before the committee next week.

The Senate Apportionment, Elections, Military and Veterans Affairs Committee heard Kirkpatrick support a bill that would exempt candidates who spend less than $500 on their campaigns from all financial reports required under the new campaign spending law approved by voters last November.

Kirpatrick said the bill would eliminate the risk of "losing the services of hundreds of able public officials."

MU President Ratchford told the Senate Appropriations Committee the university needs more money this year to grant 8 per cent salary increases, handle increased enrollment and offset inflationary costs.

The university is seeking a total budget of $201 million, an increase of $21 million over this year. But the Coordinating Board for Higher Education only recommended that MU get $187 million.

Missouri Western and Missouri Southern state colleges also sought more money, but those representatives appeared before the House Education Committee. President Leon C. Billingsly of Missouri Southern and President Marvin Looney of Missouri Western both asked that their schools be placed on full state four-year funding.

Now, the state picks up the tab for the senior and junior years, but the freshman and sophomore years are funded by 30-cent local tax levies and state junior college aid.

The full funding proposal would cost about $1.2 million for both schools.

Billingsly noted an 18 per cent increase in enrollment in the past year and the growing region that his school serves as reasons for the full funding.

But Rep. J. Anthony Dill told Missouri Western President Looney, "It's ridiculous to have two full four-year colleges in northwest Missouri," referring to Northwest Missouri State University at Maryville just 45 miles from Missouri Western.

In other action, the education committee recommended a bill that provides up to 50 per cent funding of the operational costs of all junior colleges.

The committee amended the bill to allow the state department of Higher Education to recommend additional funds for occupations or vocational courses.

The committee also passsed out other bills that would take away authority from local school boards to charge tuition for summer school, lower the minimum age for school board members in urban districts from 30 to 24 and require new teachers to take a course in psychology of exceptional children.

Litton says tariff will keep food prices up

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — President Ford's oil import tariff will keep food prices high, Rep. Jerry Litton, D-Mo., said Tuesday.

Litton told a news conference at the 22nd Pacific Northwest Farm Forum that he disagreed with Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz, who said this week that record production will cause food prices to decline in the second half of the year.

The import tariff, now $1 a barrel and slated to reach $3 a barrel will increase the price of all petroleum products, Litton said. "You can't have farmers spending more for diesel fuel, gasoline and fertilizer and expect to buy food for a lower price."

Litton said he doubted the validity of the Agriculture Department's 1975 wheat crop forecasts, because the statisticians have often miscalculated in previous years.

The department has forecast a wheat crop this year of more than 2 billion bushels, but Litton said, "I would only suggest the crop forecasts should not go to Las Vegas. They'll lose their shirts."

Litton, a member of the House Agriculture Committee, now chaired by Rep. Thomas Foley, D-Wash., described Foley as "a man who makes things happen rather than wait for things to take place."

But he said that President Ford, "who did not have a very good farm record in Congress, has not surrounded himself with a great many leaders in agriculture.

"What we need is someone in the Ford administration who knows something about agriculture, who knows the difference between a bull and a cow."

Several speakers, including Harold Noren, a senior vice president of DeKalb AgResearch, Inc., criticized consumers who blame farmers for high food prices.

Noren, whose firm in DeKalb, Ill., produces hybrid grain varieties, predicted this year will be the nation's greatest for agricultural production, including a corn crop of better than 6.2 billion bushels, up from 4.9 billion bushels last year. He said wheat production would exceed 2 billion bushels, an increase over the 1974 crop of 1.7 billion bushels.

While the bigger corn crop would mean lower feeding prices for cattlemen, Noren said corn farmers themselvss could experience economic hardship.

While the Rome Food Conference dwelled on the problems of fertilizer shortages, Noren said a more immediate need is "a reserve storage system in a great big hurry." Ray E. Switzer, president of a livestock market in Sioux City, Iowa, warned against government controls on American agriculture.

Switzer, whose Switzer-Beeson Livestock Marketing Agency is the No. 1 operator in the county's biggest livestock market, warned against government controls on American agriculture. He told the forum that farmers should resist a system like Canada's, where the price of cattle is tied to a cost of food index.

Switzer predicted that improved marketing and feeding techniques would bring the cattle industry out of its slump by the end of this year.

15 week food services class begins at SeMo

CAPE GIRARDEAU — A 15-week educational program designed for food services supervisors and dietetic assistants at nursing homes started Monday at Southeast Missouri State University.

Seven such programs are being offered across the state. The programs are sponsored by the Missouri Nursing Home Association through a grant from the Missouri Regional Medical Program and in cooperation with the vocational home economics section of the State Department of Elementary and Secondary Education.

Mrs. Grace Hoover, head of the home economics department at Southeast Missouri State, is coordinator of the training project in Cape Girardeau, and Dr. Jacquelyn O'Palka, a member of the university's home economics faculty, is the principal instructor.

Other resource persons and consultants will also be involved, Mrs. Hoover said.

The training program will meet each Monday through May 19 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in Kent Library on the campus. Altogether,the participants will get 90 hours of classroom instruction. Southeast Missouri State is offering participants four semester hours of workshop credit.

Kansas City proponents of the bill said Kanssas City would receive about $200,000 more annually in sales and related taxes if the law were repealed and that the current law is unclear on exactly what items are forbidden from sale on Sunday.

Opponents of the repeal measure are scheduled to speak before the committee next week.

The Senate Apportionment, Elections, Military and Veterans Affairs Committee heard Kirkpatrick support a bill that would exempt candidates who spend less than $500 on their campaigns from all financial reports required under the new campaign spending law approved by voters last November.

Kirpatrick said the bill would eliminate the risk of "losing the services of hundreds of able public officials."

MU President Ratchford told the Senate Appropriations Committee the university needs more money this year to grant 8 per cent salary increases, handle increased enrollment and offset inflationary costs.

The university is seeking a total budget of $201 million, an increase of $21 million over this year. But the Coordinating Board for Higher Education only recommended that MU get $187 million.

Missouri Western and Missouri Southern state colleges also sought more money, but those representatives appeared before the House Education Committee. President Leon C. Billingsly of Missouri Southern and President Marvin Looney of Missouri Western both asked that their schools be placed on full state four-year funding.

Now, the state picks up the tab for the senior and junior years, but the freshman and sophomore years are funded by 30-cent local tax levies and state junior college aid.

The full funding proposal would cost about $1.2 million for both schools.

Billingsly noted an 18 per cent increase in enrollment in the past year and the growing region that his school serves as reasons for the full funding.

But Rep. J. Anthony Dill told Missouri Western President Looney, "It's ridiculous to have two full four-year colleges in northwest Missouri," referring to Northwest Missouri State University at Maryville just 45 miles from Missouri Western.

In other action, the education committee recommended a bill that provides up to 50 per cent funding of the operational costs of all junior colleges.

The committee amended the bill to allow the state department of Higher Education to recommend additional funds for occupations or vocational courses.

The committee also passsed out other bills that would take away authority from local school boards to charge tuition for summer school, lower the minimum age for school board members in urban districts from 30 to 24 and require new teachers to take a course in psychology of exceptional children.

Litton says tariff will keep food prices up

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — President Ford's oil import tariff will keep food prices high, Rep. Jerry Litton, D-Mo., said Tuesday.

Litton told a news conference at the 22nd Pacific Northwest Farm Forum that he disagreed with Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz, who said this week that record production will cause food prices to decline in the second half of the year.

The import tariff, now $1 a barrel and slated to reach $3 a barrel will increase the price of all petroleum products, Litton said. "You can't have farmers spending more for diesel fuel, gasoline and fertilizer and expect to buy food for a lower price."

Litton said he doubted the validity of the Agriculture Department's 1975 wheat crop forecasts, because the statisticians have often miscalculated in previous years.

The department has forecast a wheat crop this year of more than 2 billion bushels, but Litton said, "I would only suggest the crop forecasts should not go to Las Vegas. They'll lose their shirts."

Litton, a member of the House Agriculture Committee, now chaired by Rep. Thomas Foley, D-Wash., described Foley as "a man who makes things happen rather than wait for things to take place."

But he said that President Ford, "who did not have a very good farm record in Congress, has not surrounded himself with a great many leaders in agriculture.

"What we need is someone in the Ford administration who knows something about agriculture, who knows the difference between a bull and a cow."

Several speakers, including Harold Noren, a senior vice president of DeKalb AgResearch, Inc., criticized consumers who blame farmers for high food prices.

Noren, whose firm in DeKalb, Ill., produces hybrid grain varieties, predicted this year will be the nation's greatest for agricultural production, including a corn crop of better than 6.2 billion bushels, up from 4.9 billion bushesls last year. He said wheat production would exceed 2 billion bushesls, an increase over the 1974 crop of 1.7 billion bushels.

While the bigger corn crop would mean lower feeding prices for cattlemen, Noren said corn farmers themselvss could experience economic hardship.

While the Rome Food Conference dwelled on the problems of fertilizer shortages, Noren said a more immediate need is "a reserve storage system in a great big hurry." Ray E. Switzer, president of a livestock market in Sioux City, Iowa, warned against government controls on American agriculture.

Switzer, whose Switzer-Beeson Livestock Marketing Agency is the No. 1 operator in the county's biggest livestock market, warned against government controls on American agriculture. He told the forum that farmers should resist a system like Canada's, where the price of cattle is tied to a cost of food index.

Switzer predicted that improved marketing and feeding techniques would bring the cattle industry out of its slump by the end of this year.

15 week food services class begins at SeMo

CAPE GIRARDEAU — A 15-week educational program designed for food services supervisors and dietetic assistants at nursing homes started Monday at Southeast Missouri State University.

Seven such programs are being offered across the state. The programs are sponsored by the Missouri Nursing Home Association through a grant from the Missouri Regional Medical Program and in cooperation with the vocational home economics section of the State Department of Elementary and Secondary Education.

Mrs. Grace Hoover, head of the home economics department at Southeast Missouri State, is coordinator of the training project in Cape Girardeau, and Dr. Jacquelyn O'Palka, a member of the university's home economics faculty, is the principal instructor.

Other resource persons and consultants will also be involved, Mrs. Hoover said.

The training program will meet each Monday through May 19 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in Kent Library on the campus. Altogether the participants will get 90 hours of classroom instruction. Southeast Missouri State is offering participants four semester hours of workshop credit.

The instant it happened

AT THAT MOMENT...

Bill Warneke was late, but that's what you get for being a nice guy.

Warneke had been assigned to cover the departure of New York's Mayor William J. Gaynor from Hoboken to Europe, August 9, 1910. Pretty routine stuff for Joseph Pulitzer's New York World which liked to stress the improbable.

Just as Warneke was leaving, a colleague came in with a problem. The city was replacing its fire horses with motor-driven fire engines and the World city desk wanted a shot of a horse having a last laugh. But how do you get a horse to laugh?

Warneke said he would try something on his way to Hoboken. He stopped off at a fire house and tried all the sure fire things that make horses laugh. None worked. Then an idea: he fed the animal some caramel candy. Trying to get the goo off his teeth, the horse wriggled his lips and Warneke clicked. After all, no one had to HEAR the laugh ...

So, by the time Warneke boards the SS Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, all the other photographers have come and gone. The Mayor is talking to several newsmen so Warneke takes a picture, then changes holders for just one more, your Honor.

At that moment, a man named J. J. Gallagher walks up, pulls a pistol out and jerks the trigger six inches from Gaynor's head. The gun misfires. The man fires twice more, hitting the Mayor both times. He staggers as aides rush up. The would-be assassin is overpowered by 300-pound "Big Bill" Edwards, the Street Cleaning Commissioner. Gaynor, who will survive, is carried off on a stretcher and Warneke has a classic of photo journalism, proving again that it can be better late then never. And who ever heard of a laughing horse, anyway?

The rural lore in Ontario holds that if you kill a lightning bug, you will be struck by lightning in the next thunderstorm.

Some states can't meet requirements for funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — At least six states apparently won't be able to meet federal requirements for obtaining a share of the $2 billion in impounded highway funds being released by the Ford administration.

But officials in at least 17 other states say they're eager to put the money to work and are able to meet the requirement for matching federal dollars with state funds.

President Ford announced release of the funds Tuesday in an effort to stimulate employment in the construction industry. White House spokesmen say the money will fund 125,000 new jobs.

Officials in some states planning to apply for the money say they'll have to rearrange their budgets or ask state legislatures to approve funds.

Spokesmen in six states, Ohio, Illinois, Washington, Minnesota, Idaho and South Dakota, said there was not enough state money to match the federal funds.

Under the current financing formula, states are required to provide $3 for every $7 the federal government allots for non-interstate highways and $1 for every $9 in federal money for interstate highway construction.

The Transportation Department said the money will be released to states on a "first come, first served" basis. "We're just saying, 'Come and get it, it's here,'" a department spokesman said.

Among the first states to announce their intention to get in line were Pennsylvania, New York, Florida, Arizona, Mississippi, Tennessee, Oregon, Louisiana, Montana, Wyoming, Nebraska, Nevada, South Carolina, New Hampshire, Hawaii, Georgia and Kansas, where Ford announced release of the money.

Some state officials say they don't know where the necessary matching money will come from, but they're determined to find it.

"If we have to get matching funds, we'll do something to get the money," said Fred Klabore, state highway engineer in Oregon.

In Wisconsin, Deputy Transportation Secretary Wayne McGown said there are many questions about whether the state can meet the matching requirements, but "every effort will be made to meet them."

Officials in some states are hoping to get more money than has been designated for them. Louisiana Highway Director W.T. Taylor said the state is eligible only for $69 million of the impounded funds but has submitted $100 million worth of projects on the chance that more money may become available if other states don't have matching money or projects ready to go.

The released funds also can be used for mass transit systems if a state decides to substitute the money for mass transit instead of building a highway, the White House said. Asst. White House Press Secretary John Carlson said mass transit systems could claim about $700 million of the $2 billion.

Aid payments total $97,183

EAST PRAIRIE — Expenditures during January by the Division of Family Services in Misssissippi County totaled $97,183, according to figures released by Mrs. Agnes Cunningham, county director.

Of the total amount, $88,336 went to 709 aid to dependent children cases, including 1,802 children.

General relief cases, numbering 131, received assistance in the amount of $8,847.

Mississippi County has 760 supplemental security income and Missouri supplemental cases, with total expenditures of $22,872, and 440 supplemental security income only cases, for which medical benefits and social services are provided.

There are 88 persons receiving medical assistance only, and the county has 121 recipients in professional nursing homes.

State jobless rate increases

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo.(AP) — A record 110,000 Missouri workers collected state unemployment benefits totaling $21.8 million last month, representing an 86 per cent hike in benefits since December.

John Meystrik, state employment security chief, said the January payments, which were made to 7.5 per cent of those covered by the employment compensation program, increased from December's total payments of $11.7 million.

December's jobless rate was 5.8 per cent, but employment security officials have predicted it will climb to about 6.8 per cent later this month.

But officials in at least 17 other states say they're eager to put the money to work and are able to meet the requirement for matching federal dollars with state funds.

President Ford announced release of the funds Tuesday in an effort to stimulate employment in the construction industry. White House spokesmen say the money will fund 125,000 new jobs.

Officials in some states planning to apply for the money say they'll have to rearrange their budgets or ask state legislatures to approve funds.

Spokesmen in six states, Ohio, Illinois, Washington, Minnesota, Idaho and South Dakota, said there was not enough state money to match the federal funds.

Under the current financing formula, states are required to provide $3 for every $7 the federal government allots for non-interstate highways and $1 for every $9 in federal money for interstate highway construction.

The Transportation Department said the money will be released to states on a "first come, first served" basis. "We're just saying, 'Come and get it, it's here,'" a department spokesman said.

Among the first states to announce their intention to get in line were Pennsylvania, New York, Florida, Arizona, Mississippi, Tennessee, Oregon, Louisiana, Montana, Wyoming, Nebraska, Nevada, South Carolina, New Hampshire, Hawaii, Georgia and Kansas, where Ford announced release of the money.

Some state officials say they don't know where the necessary matching money will come from, but they're determined to find it.

"If we have to get matching funds, we'll do something to get the money," said Fred Klabore, state highway engineer in Oregon.

In Wisconsin, Deputy Transportation Secretary Wayne McGown said there are many questions about whether the state can meet the matching requirements, but "every effort will be made to meet them."

Officials in some states are hoping to get more money than has been designated for them. Louisiana Highway Director W.T. Taylor said the state is eligible only for $69 million of the impounded funds but has submitted $100 million worth of projects on the chance that more money may become available if other states don't have matching money or projects ready to go.

The released funds also can be used for mass transit systems if a state decides to substitute the money for mass transit instead of building a highway, the White House said. Asst. White House Press Secretary John Carlson said mass transit systems could claim about $700 million of the $2 billion.

Aid payments total $97,183

EAST PRAIRIE — Expenditures during January by the Division of Family Services in Misssissippi County totaled $97,183, according to figures released by Mrs. Agnes Cunningham, county director.

Of the total amount, $88,336 went to 709 aid to dependent children cases, including 1,802 children.

General relief cases, numbering 131, received assistance in the amount of $8,847.

Mississippi County has 760 supplemental security income and Missouri supplemental cases, with total expenditures of $22,872, and 440 supplemental security income only cases, for which medical benefits and social services are provided.

There are 88 persons receiving medical assistance only, and the county has 121 recipients in professional nursing homes.

State jobless rate increases

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo.(AP) — A record 110,000 Missouri workers collected state unemployment benefits totaling $21.8 million last month, representing an 86 per cent hike in benefits since December.

John Meystrik, state employment security chief, said the January payments, which were made to 7.5 per cent of those covered by the employment compensation program, increased from December's total payments of $11.7 million.

December's jobless rate was 5.8 per cent, but employment security officials have predicted it will climb to about 6.8 per cent later this month.

Today in U.S. history

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, Feb. 12, the 43rd day of 1975. There are 322 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

In 1809, Abraham Lincoln was born in what was then Hardin County, Kentucky.

On this date—

In 1554, Lady Jane Grey, who had been Queen of England for ten days, was beheaded after being charged with treason.

In 1733, English colonists led by James Oglethorpe landed at Savannah, Ga.

In 1809, the scientist who developed the theory of evolution, Charles Darwin, was born in Shrewsbury, England.

In 1912, China became a republic as the Manchu Dynasty was overthrown by Dr. Sun Yat-sen.

In 1914, ground was broken for the Lincoln Memorial in Washington.

In 1971, eight U.S. helicopters were shot down during operations over the Indochina kingdom of Laos.

Ten years ago: Queen Elizabeth II of Britain was on a state visit to the Sudan.

Five years ago: Israeli planes attacked near Cairo, and the Egyptian government said 70 workers were killed.

One year ago: The Soviet writer, Alexander Solzhenitsyn, was arrested at his Moscow apartment.

Today's birthdays: Retired General Omar Bradley is 82. Actor Lorne Green is 60. Alice Roosevelt Longworth is 91.

Thought for today: It never occurs to some politicians that Lincoln is worth imitating as well as quoting — Anonymous.
